INTRODUCTION

THIS volume forms one of a series of publications issued by the Scottish History Society dealing with household expenditure during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and goes far to fill the hiatus in years between the Foulis Book ¹ and the Ochtertyre Book.² For this reason alone it would serve a useful purpose, but considerably more than this is claimed for it. In the first place, it deals with a much wider range of subject-matter than is usually included in what are termed 'House Books,' taking these words in their ordinary acceptation. To a certain extent, therefore, its title is inadequate. In the second place, owing to the various changes of residence of the family with which it deals, it affords an opportunity of contrasting the expenses of living in the country with those of living in a close in the High Street of Edinburgh, and again of comparing these with the expenses of living in London, in Bath, and on the Continent. In the third place, it gives us memoranda as to the duties of servants, as to the arrangement of the dinner-table, as to travelling, and as to many other matters of interest. And lastly, it brings us indirectly into touch with a remarkably interesting group of people, whether viewed socially, politically, or intellectually, who were well known in their day and generation, and whose history it is a pleasure to study.

The Baillies of Jerviswood were cadets of the Baillies of St. John's Kirk, who in their turn were cadets of the Baillies of Lamington, 'the original Balliols,' according to Lord Fountainhall. The first Baillie of Jerviswood was George Baillie, second son of Baillie of St. John's Kirk,¹ and grandfather of Lady Grisell's husband. As was then common, he entered into trade, duly compeared before Thomas Inglis, Dean of Guild of the City of Edinburgh, and others, on 8th September 1613, 'sufficientlie armit with ane furnisht hagbut,' and was sworn in as a 'Merchant Burgess' of the city. What he traded in it is impossible to say, but he at least owned a share in a ship to which he had succeeded through his first wife Christian Vorie.² This lady, who was the illegitimate³ daughter of John Vorie in Balbaird, died without issue on 7th October 1628. George Baillie throve, became a town councillor⁴ in 1631, purchased in 1636 the lands of Jerviswood in Lanarkshire from the family of Livingston, and in 1643 the estate of Mellerstain in Berwickshire from Andrew Edmonston of Ednem. The titles to these properties, along with his 'best clothes' and his 'silver and goldsmyth work,' were 'all totallie burnt' in August 1645, 'the tyme of that Lamentable fyre that was then in Edinburgh,' they being contained in 'ane trunk and ane kist' in the house of James Baillie, Merchant Burgess of Edinburgh, which was 'totallie burnt' (Act of Parliament, 1647).

It was probably before 1636 that he had made his second marriage—that with Margaret Johnston, daughter of James Johnston, Merchant Burgess of Edinburgh, and sister of Sir Archibald Johnston, Lord Wariston, by whom he had several children, namely :—

1. John Baillie, who predeceased him.
2. Robert Baillie, who succeeded him.
3. Archibald Baillie.
4. Captain George Baillie of Mannerhall.
5. Captain James Baillie of the City Guard of Edinburgh.
6. Christian Baillie.
7. Elizabeth Baillie,¹ was married to Mr. James Kirkton, at one time minister of Merton, afterwards of the Tolbooth, Edinburgh, 31st December 1657 (Edinburgh Register of Marriages).

8. Rachel Baillie, was married first to Mr. Andrew Gray, one of the ministers of Glasgow ; second, to Mr. George Hutcheson, at one time minister in Edinburgh, afterwards in Irvine.

George Baillie probably died early in 1646, for the ‘Account of the Annual Rents belonging to the Children of George Baillie’ begins in March of that year. He was succeeded by his eldest surviving son Robert. A sketch of the life of this remarkable man will be found on p. 269. The original is not in the handwriting of Lady Grisell, but it is endorsed by her ‘My father-in-law.’ As will be seen from this sketch, Robert Baillie first came into the clutches of the law in 1676, through rescuing his brother-in-law, the Rev. James Kirkton, from the hands of Captain Carstairs. The story is a curious one, and will be found fully set forth in volume forty-four of the Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. The result of the trial was that Baillie was fined £500 sterling,²

² This fine, or at least a considerable part of it, was subsequently remitted by the Earl of Lauderdale.

and incarcerated in the Edinburgh Tolbooth. It was during his confinement at this time that his son George Baillie first made the acquaintance of his future wife, then Grisell Hume, aged twelve, the eldest daughter of Sir Patrick Hume, afterwards Earl of Marchmont. Sir Patrick was anxious to communicate with Jerviswood, to whom he was deeply attached, and in order to avoid suspicion sent his little daughter from Redbraes, his country seat, to execute this dangerous and delicate commission. She succeeded so well 'that from that time her hardships began, from the confidence was put in her and the activity she naturally had far beyond her age in executing whatever she was intrusted with.'

When Robert Baillie was arrested in 1683 for high treason, he was residing in London, and was accordingly first confined in the Tower. As his condemnation by an English court would only have entailed forfeiture of his movable estate, it was resolved to send him and his fellow-countrymen in misfortune to Scotland, where their heritable estates could also be confiscated. The prisoners were accordingly shipped north, and we have the following pathetic note as to her husband's arrest and journey to Scotland in the handwriting of Mrs. Baillie. It is contained in a small commonplace-book of her husband's, and has for convenience been divided into sentences.

The trial and its result are too well known to require more than a passing notice here. Jerviswood, who had been desperately ill in prison, was carried to court in his 'night gown,'¹ and driven to execution a few hours after sentence had been pronounced. Wodrow reports that he said to his son George, who had been recalled from his studies abroad, 'If ye have a strong heart ye may go and see me nagled; but if ye have not a heart for it ye may stay away.' From what Lady Murray says in her Memoirs he appears to have gone, but whether he remained with his aunt Mrs. Graden to see the body 'cut in coupons and oyled and tarred' is nowhere mentioned. Lady Murray, however, states that his mother and aunts said 'that it ever after gave that grave, silent, thoughtful turn to his temper which before that time was not natural to him.' It also gave him what was by no means so common at that period, namely, feelings of compassion towards his political opponents when the wheel of fortune placed some of them in the same position in which his father had been. After the '15,' when he was a Lord of the Treasury, and at a time when to speak his mind might easily have damaged his position, he publicly 'declared himself for mercy to the poor unhappy sufferers by the rebellion,' and began a long Parliamentary speech 'by saying that he had been bred in the School of affliction which had instructed him in both the reasonableness and necessity of showing mercy to others in the like circumstances.' As his accounts show, he did more than talk, for there are several entries of payments made to the unfortunate prisoners taken at Preston. 'To the Laird of Wedderburn when in Prison, £5'; 'To James Hume of Aiton My L^d Humes brother, £1, 1s. 6d'; 'To Mrs. Hume Whitefield, £1, 1s. 6d.,' wife of Hume of Whitefield, and to others—thus confirming Lady Murray's statement as to his helping 'the wives, sisters, and other relations and friends of the poor prisoners.' That Lord Kenmore's body was handed to his relatives instead of to the surgeons for dissection was entirely owing to his intervention and foresight.

His conduct to these unfortunates is made even more remarkable by the fact 'that they plundered several gentlemen's country seats (particularly the houses of Sir John Pringle of Stitchell and Mr. Baillie of Jerviswood) carry'd away what peuther they could get to melt down for Bullets, destroyed their corn, etc.' ¹

Robert Baillie cannot have been much over fifty,² if so old, at the time of his death. Lord Fountainhall in his Chronological Notes describes him as being a 'huffy proud man' who 'huffed a little that he should be esteemed guilty of any design against the life of the King or his brother whereof he purged himself as he hoped for mercy.' He was survived by his widow and by the following children, who were all born at Jerviswood Tower, which he made his residence :—

George, who succeeded him, born 16th March 1664.

Archibald, born 15th April 1665.

Robert, born 4th July 1666.

William, born 24th January 1669.

Rachel, born 3rd April 1671, married Dundas of Breastmilne, Linlithgowshire.

James, born 9th June 1673.

John, born 14th March 1675, died 1717. His funeral cost £11, 16s. 6d. (see p. 59).

Helen, born July 1676, married John Hay, Writer in Edinburgh, died in 1717.

Elizabeth, born 25th September 1677, married Mr. Robert Weems of Graingemuir, made Collector at Alloa March 1717.

Robert Baillie's execution took place on 24th December 1684, and while his head was exhibited on the Netherbow Port of the city of Edinburgh, his quarters were exposed on the Tolbooths of Jedburgh, Lanark, Ayr, and Glasgow. The quarter which was sent to Lanark Tolbooth, not a mile from his own house of Jerviswood, remained but a short time in its position, for 'a band of young men, headed by a certain yeoman named William Leishman, came and stole it away for burial.'¹ This Leishman's son and namesake was afterwards sent to college by the Jerviswood family out of gratitude for this service, and eventually became Principal Leishman of Glasgow University.

The execution of Robert Baillie made it evident to his old friend Sir Patrick Hume that if he wished to preserve his life he had better get out of Scotland as soon as possible. The story of Sir Patrick's concealment and subsequent a mild gamble, as the numerous entries in the London accounts show.

On his return to Scotland Baillie found himself in a very different position from that in which he had been when he fled the country. The Whigs and Presbyterians were all-powerful. His father and his grandfather—Lord Wariston—were regarded as martyrs for the cause; his uncle James Johnston had been appointed Secretary of State for Scotland; and his first cousin once removed, Mr. Gilbert Burnet, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury, was now King William's chaplain. It is not surprising, therefore, that he was at once elected one of the four members returned by the county of Berwick to the Convention of Estates; that he was appointed a Commissioner of Supply for that county and also for Lanarkshire; that his estates were restored to him; and that he was made Receiver-General of Scotland, a post which brought him in £300 a year, a good salary for those days. His prospects were now such as to entitle him to ask for the hand of Grisell Hume from her father, who in December 1690 had been created Lord Polwarth. The young people had always been deeply attached, and they were married at Redbraes, the seat of the Humes, on 17th September 1691. It was an ideal union. 'They never had the shadow of a quarrel or misunderstanding or dryness betwixt them, not for a moment.' 'He never went abroad but she went to the window to look after him; and so she did that very day he fell ill the last time he was abroad, never taking her eyes from him as long as he was in sight.'

It is from about a year after the date of the marriage that the accounts begin to be kept, but before referring to them it is necessary for their proper appreciation to say a few words regarding George Baillie's position, political and social.

It has been already stated, that Baillie sat in Parliament

GEORGE BAILLIE OF JERVISWOOD AND HIS DAUGHTER GRISELL.

as one of the members for Berwickshire, of course as a Whig; but he was by no means the sort of man to vote blindly for the 'Court Party,' however much that might be to his interest. When, therefore, questions arose in Parliament regarding the affairs of the unfortunate 'Company trading to Africa and the Indies,' better known as the Darien Company, in which he held £1000 of stock, and of which he was a director, he was one of those who, deeply resenting the interference of England, joined the new 'Country Party' which was then formed.¹ Of this party Baillie was one of the leaders, and 'gained a great reputation by standing so stiffly by the interests of his country.'² So much so, that when in 1703, a year after the accession of Anne, a new Parliament was called, Baillie was returned as member for the shires of both Berwick and Lanark. Electing to sit for the latter, he continued to represent this constituency until his retirement in 1725. The Sessions that followed were most momentous ones, embracing the long struggle that preceded the passing of the Treaty of Union, but it is unnecessary here to trace the prominent parts played by the 'Country Party' and subsequently by the 'Squadrone Volante' in that fight, as they are well known. Baillie was in the forefront of the battle. He was one of the three representatives sent by the 'Country Party' to set their views before Queen Anne, was made Lord Treasurer Depute in the short-lived Tweeddale Administration and a member of the Privy Council, and, in short, was 'by far the most significant man' of the 'Squadrone Volante,' 'to whom he was a kind of dictator.'³ The position occupied by Baillie at this time is well shown in the Jerviswood Correspondence, where we read the private views of the three leaders of the 'Squadron Volante,' viz. of Secretary Johnston, that 'shrewd cunning fellow'; of the Earl of Roxburgh, 'the best accomplished young man of quality in Europe'; and of Baillie of Jerviswood, 'the morose, proud and severe, but of a profound solid judgment.'¹ We see how, step by step, they were driven to the conclusion that the only way to ensure the Hanoverian Succession, the Presbyterian form of worship, and equal trading rights with England was by an absolute union with her; they had no love for union in itself, seeing clearly what it entailed; but it seemed to them to be the least of the many evils that hovered over Scotland. The 'Squadron Volante' has been accused of venality; but these letters make it clear that, while in the manner of the time the leaders had a keen eye to their own interests, and hoped to be eventually rewarded for the course they adopted, still in making up their minds to that course they conscientiously considered, in the first instance, the interests of their country.

That the Treaty of Union could not have been passed without the help of the 'Squadron Volante' was fully recognised; and it was therefore not unnatural that Baillie should be one of the selected members who sat for Scotland in the first Union Parliament, and that he should be rewarded for his services by being appointed one of the Commissioners of Trade with a salary of £1000 per annum. The duties of this post he was eminently capable of discharging, as he had been a member of the important Council of Trade, which before the Union had reported on the exports and imports of Scotland.

The first elected United Parliament met in November 1708, and in this Baillie sat, as formerly, for the county of Lanark. Then followed the Queen's quarrel with the

Marlboroughs, the ousting of Her Majesty's Whig advisers, the election of 1710, with the return to Parliament of a large Tory majority. Baillie, however, retained his seat, and in connection with his so doing his daughter writes: 'As he never liked making court to any minister when there was anything he thought proper for him to represent he always had a private audience of the Queen, who shewed so great a personal favour for him, that, on the change of her ministry in the end of her reign, she kept him in office a year after the rest of his party were turned out, and when they prevailed to have him removed, they pressed her to give some orders they thought necessary to hinder him of his election, which she absolutely refused.'

If Scotland had good reason to object to the treatment it had received at the hands of a Whig Government, it had still more reason to resent what was meted out to it by the now victorious Tory party. Both parties in Scotland were exasperated by one or more of the measures passed by Parliament, and even amongst the staunchest Whigs there was a feeling that the Union had been a failure and should be repealed. Indeed there was made by the Scottish members a movement in this direction, in which Baillie to a qualified extent joined.¹ The question even got the length of being raised in the Lords, but it was unsuccessful and, as it was not thought advisable to bring it forward in the Commons, it accordingly fizzled out. This result was in no ways due to the want of Parliamentary sympathy for the Scottish Jacobite party, who had always been opposed to the Union, for the Tories made little or no concealment of their intention to attempt the restoration of the Stuarts upon Anne's death. So fully was this recognised by the Whigs, that, resolving to resist to the death, they prepared themselves for civil war. Societies were formed of those favouring the Hanoverian Succession, and meetings were held to arrange for organised resistance and for the purchase of arms. That Baillie took his share in these warlike preparations is shown by the following entries in his accounts :—

1714. 15 May	For a gun and 30 swords	£4
	packing 4s. 6d.		£4	4 6
18 Sept.	For 29 guns and Bagginets		18	4 1 $\frac{1}{2}$
	For a barrill powder weighe 7 $\frac{1}{2}$
	stone		3	6 8

One cannot help wondering if these arms fell into the hands of the Highlanders when they looted Mellerstain in the ‘ ‘15.’

Mercifully for the peace of the country, Queen Anne’s sudden death on 1st August 1714 threw out the calculations of the Jacobites, and before they had time to rally George had been proclaimed king and had landed in England.

On his arrival there naturally ensued a complete change in Government, the Whigs once again being all-powerful.¹ Of Baillie’s position at this period Lady Murray writes: ‘Upon the accession of King George the First he was made one of the Lords of the Admiralty,² and soon after one of the Lords of the Treasury,³ without his ever soliciting or asking for either of them; and had no thought nor expectation of being in the Treasury when the Earl of Stanhope, then at the head of it, sent him orders to come and take his place at the Board. There he continued till at his own earnest desire he laid down in the year 1725 against the opinion and entreaties of all his friends, and even the King desired him to continue and was a year before he accepted his demission.' ¹ If Lady Murray is correct in the latter part of this statement, Baillie was more fortunate than the other members of his party, who in 1725 were all turned out of their posts by Walpole for not being sufficiently subservient to the English view of Scottish policy. Be that as it may, he ceased after the year 1725 to take a part in public affairs, and devoted himself to the education of his grandchildren, and to 'constant meditation, contemplation and prayer.' He died at Oxford on 6th August 1738, at the age of seventy-five, and was buried at Mellerstain in the private burial-ground prepared by himself. 'At one and the same time he was a most zealous patriot, a very able statesman, and a most perfect Christian.

His courage was undaunted and his patience immovable; his piety unfeigned and his truth exact to the greatest precision.' ²

In addition to his political work, Baillie, as was but natural, took a deep interest in the affairs of the Church of Scotland. He was chosen as representative elder to the General Assembly for the parish of Earlston, in which Mellerstain lies, and this position he held for many years, attending the Assembly with characteristic regularity. When resident in Edinburgh he had a loft in that part of St. Giles known as the Tolbooth, for which he paid £1, 10s. a year, and when in England he 'continued steadily in his own Church and principles,' having a pew in King's Street Chapel, London, for which he paid 9s. a quarter. He also contributed generously to the building funds of Presbyterian Churches both in England and Ireland. Not that he adhered to his own Church with 'rigidness and narrowness of soul,' for his Accounts show that when abroad his charities extended to priests and nuns and monks; and Lady Murray narrates how 'two of the poor Episcopal Clergy in Scotland came to ask charity for themselves and their brethren without the expectation of seeing him. He received them kindly, kept them to dinner with him, contributed to their necessities, and shewed great displeasure at his servants for not having taken proper care of their horses, nor bringing them so readily as they would have done to those from whom they expected a reward.'

It must not, however, be imagined that Baillie was entirely taken up with politics and religion. He had his 'hunting mares,' which we learn from the Accounts were specially fed with beans, and he went on hawking expeditions. He evidently could also take a hand in a carouse, for on 4th June 1706, the Earl of Haddington writing to the Earl of Mar says: 'Drinking indeed succeeds pretty well, thanks to my Lord Roths, Hindfoord, Anster, George Baillie, James Bruce and myself, who as long as the Assembly lasted lived as discreet a life as you could wish.'¹ When the family went to stay in London in 1715, Lady Grisell and he took part with their daughters in the 'ball, masquerades, parties by water and such like,' 'neither choosing to deprive us of them nor let us go alone . . . and they generally were calculated at times most convenient for my father.' Many are the references in the Accounts to these parties.

There is no doubt, however, that such diversions were 'not quite suitable to his own temper,' and that his chief pleasure lay in his books and in retirement with them. The Accounts show that Baillie constantly bought books. He purchased from Mosman in the Luckenbooths, from Johnston, Knox and Vallance; he bought at auctions, and had heavy accounts with Andrew Bell, Bookseller, London. One of the earliest entries after his marriage is for the erection in his first house in Warriston Close of five double presses for books at a cost of £72 Scots or £6 sterling; and when he finally left Edinburgh for Mellerstain in 1708 he took with him four cartloads of books. He was not contented with reading himself, but must needs encourage reading amongst his dependants. He saw to it that they all had Bibles; and on one occasion we find him spending £3, 10s. sterling 'for books for the tenants and servants,' and on another, 2s. for a 'Thomas a Kempis to the servants.' It is to be regretted that the Accounts only give the names of a few of the volumes purchased, such as: 'Jaillots Maps,'¹ £12, 10s. stg.; 'Mazerays History,'² 3 vols., £6, 13s. 4d. stg.; 'Foster's Book,' 6s. 8d. stg.; 'Defoe's Book in defence of the Union,' 2s. 6d. (this of course purchased in 1707); 'Naphtali,' covenanting Records, by Sir James Stewart of Goodtrees; 'Johnston, Engraver, for his book of Maps, £2, 2s.'; 'a little Divinity Book,' 1s. 8d.; 'Atalantis' by Mrs. Manley, which was one of the scandalous works lent out by Allan Ramsay in 1726 from the first circulating library in the kingdom.

Even when travelling on the Continent books were purchased, and a box was sent home containing, along with several books of prints, maps and music, such works as Telimon's History, Don Quixote, Bocaccio, Le Fortunato Neapolinano (in two volumes), Delices de la Holland,

The Mellerstain library contains to this day many hundreds of books with his bookplate carefully pasted in.

Baillie was also a patron of the Arts. He had 'wax pictures' done of his son and mother, presumably after their deaths, for which he pays £1, 14s. 4d. stg. and £3, 4s. stg. respectively. Then he purchased many pictures from John Scugald, whose name is associated with the first picture gallery in Europe, this artist having added an upper story to his house in Advocates' Close, Edinburgh, and fitted it up for the purpose of an exhibition.¹

The prices paid strike one as small, even bearing in mind the remuneration of services at that time. For instance: 'To Scugald for 2 pictures and frames, £74 8s.' Scots (£6, 4s. stg.). 'Scuglad for pictures, £48' Scots (£4). 'Scugald balance, £96' Scots (£8 stg.). '1705 Decr. To John Scugald painter in full of all accounts, £84 Scots' (£7 stg.). The most curious entry, however, in connection with this artist is the following in 1706: 'For drawing Grisies peticoat by Skugald,' 5s. stg. Does this mean that he turned his artistic talents to designing clothes or grounding patterns for embroidery?

In 1710 Sir John Medina painted Baillie, his wife, and the 'two bairens's pictures' for £20 stg.,² and in 1711

When at Florence in 1733, Lady Grisell has portraits of her husband, her daughter Grisie, and her two grand-daughters, Grisie and Helen, painted by Mr. Martin at a cost of eleven guineas, and in Bologne a 'pictor of the Autom' is purchased for £2. Cases are bought for these works of art, the conveyance of which must have added considerably to the trouble of their homeward journey.

George Baillie died on 6th August 1738 and was survived by his widow and by two daughters—Grisell, born at Redbraes on 26th October 1692, and Rachel, born in Warriston's Land on 23rd February 1696. He was predeceased by his only son Robert, who was born on 23rd February 1694 and died on 28th February 1696. His daughter Grisell was married on 16th August 1710 to 'Mr. Alexander Murray, the son and heir of Sir David Murray of Stanhope, Baronet, by the Lady Anne Bruce, daughter of Alexander, Earl of Kincardine.'² Grisell's father, who 'was the most just and sagacious observer of mankind that was possible,' was opposed to the marriage, but overcome by his daughter's tears, reluctantly gave his consent. The union turned out a most unfortunate one, for Mr. Murray 'under a pleasing exterior' possessed 'a dark, moody and ferocious temper' amounting almost to insanity, which 'made him the helpless victim of the most groundless suspicions.' This curious temper showed itself on the very first day after their marriage, and although he appears to have lived with his wife in his father-in-law's house for some five months, it was at length found necessary to obtain from the Court a Decree of Separation, which was pronounced on 5th March 1714. With all his unreasoning jealousy, which made life with him impossible and dangerous, Mr. Murray seems to have been really attached to his wife, for it is told that at the time when she was having her portrait painted in London, a gentleman, who afterwards was discovered to be her husband, came frequently to the artist's studio, where he 'would stand for an hour with his arms folded gazing at her likeness.'

Mrs. Murray, afterwards Lady Murray, was for many years a great friend of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, until the latter 'thought fit to exercise her wicked wit in an infamous ballad; which of course she loudly disclaimed all knowledge of, but of which her own letters to her sister Lady Mar plainly enough betray her to have been the writer.'¹

Lady Murray was famous both in London and Edinburgh for her singing. Gay refers to her in his lines to Pope as 'the sweet-tongued Murray,' and afterwards in her flat in the Parliament Square of Edinburgh 'she was still accustomed to sing the native airs and ballads of her own country with a delicacy and pathos quite peculiar to herself,'² and to draw tears from the eyes of her audience.

LADY MURRAY,

AGED 33.

(From a Portrait at Mellerstain by Maria Verelst.)

Lady Murray's younger sister Rachel was married at Edinburgh, on 3rd September 1717, to Charles, Lord Binning, the eldest son of the Earl of Haddington. This marriage was as happy as Lady Murray's was the reverse. Lord Binning¹ seems in very truth to have become one of the family, and his early death from consumption, at Naples, on 27th December 1732, was deeply felt both by Lady Grisell and her husband. 'His heart, etc., was buried in St. Corrolas Church Yearl and his corps sent home to Tiningham.'² It was to his father-in-law that Lord Binning on his deathbed confided the education of his children. Lord Binning was survived by:—

Grisell Hamilton, born 6th April 1719.

Thomas Hamilton, born 23rd October 1720, who succeeded his grandfather Lord Haddington.

George Hamilton, born 24th June 1723, who assumed the surname of Baillie and succeeded to the Baillie estates. His descendants eventually succeeded to the Earldom of Haddington.

Charles James Hamilton, born 8th October 1727.

Rachel Hamilton, born 3rd January 1729.

He was predeceased by Helen, born 8th October 1724; Charles, born 6th October 1725; and John, born 22nd October 1726.³

On Mr. Baillie's death his estate passed by destination to his widow in liferent, then to his elder daughter and her issue, whom failing, to his younger daughter and her second son. Thus, as Lady Murray had no children, Lady Binning's second son, George, succeeded to the properties of Jerviswood, Mellerstain, etc., assuming the name of Baillie. Through the failure of the male line of Thomas, Lady Binning's eldest son, the succession to the Earldom of Haddington opened to the descendants of her second son George. The Haddington and Baillie estates are thus now merged in the same proprietor, and Mellerstain is still the residence of George Baillie's descendants. Nothing now remains of the 'Old melancholick hous that had had great buildings about it,'¹ purchased by the first George Baillie of Jerviswood in 1643, and of the Mellerstain known to Lady Grisell only the wings are left. Although the old tower which she used to have repaired so regularly has been replaced by the present Adam's buildings, her own voluminous Memoranda and Account Books have been carefully preserved, and it is to her descendant, Lord Binning, the present occupant of Mellerstain, that the thanks of the Scottish History Society are due for his kindness in placing at its disposal these most interesting and valuable records of a bygone age and of an exceptional personality.

So many sketches of Lady Grisell's life have been published, dealing with her romantic history, her poetic talents, and her charming personality that nothing further need be said here upon these points. Her extraordinary business capacity has also been the subject of much comment, but as it is the side of her character which is most prominently brought into notice in this volume, a few words in regard to it may be pardoned.

From the time Lady Grisell, as a mere child, had proved her capacity through her skill in gaining communication

¹ 'Nov. 10, 1659. . . . We cam be Eccles and Stichell, and at lenth cam to Mellerstane, wher we met with Jerviswood, who took us in and we took a drink with him. with Mr. Robert Baillie, she became the mainstay of her father's house. She went with her mother to London after her father's estates were forfeited in order to solicit an allowance for the support of the family; she came back from Holland by herself and brought over her younger sister Julian to Utrecht—and a wretched journey it was; at Utrecht she sat up two nights a week 'to do the business that was necessary for the household'; after her marriage she returned to her father's house, on one occasion for many weeks, and worked day and night at putting his accounts in order; when her brother was abroad she managed his affairs, and seems also to have helped many of her friends as well. It is, therefore, little to be wondered at that her husband trusted her with the entire administration of his finances 'without scarce asking a question about them, except sometimes to say to her, "Is my debt paid yet?"' though often did she apply to him for direction and advice.' 'In her family her attention and economy reached to the smallest things; and though this was her practice from her youth there never appeared in her the least air of narrowness; and so far was she from avarice, the common vice of the age, that often has my father said to her "I never saw the like of you, goodwife, the older you grow, you grow the more extravagant; but do as you please provided I be in no debt.'" So writes Lady Murray, and an examination of the Accounts fully bears out her statement, showing as it does the most careful supervision, and also at times what must have struck her husband as dangerous extravagance. For instance, when the family went to London and the expenditure suddenly rises from £733, 16s. 11d. in 1714 to £1872, 18s. 10d. in 1715, the 'clothes' bills alone increasing from an average of about £60 to £346, 13s. 4d., one can quite undersand Mr. Baillie being somewhat horrified.

As an example of the careful way Lady Grisell went into all matters of expenditure, note the following little statement. The unusual circumstance—namely, that Lady Grisell makes a mistake in it and thus arrives at a wrong result—rather adds to its interest. It is merely a jotting on a scrap of paper in Lady Grisell's handwriting, and was drawn up while abroad in 1732 to enable her to judge whether it was cheaper to take a house or to go into lodgings.

We see from the Accounts that Lady Grisell shortly after her marriage took a course of cooking lessons from Mrs. Addison, for which she paid £1, 6s. stg., and also a course of dancing lessons for which £8 stg. was to be paid to 'perfite her.' Although no mention is made of her having taken lessons in book-keeping, one cannot help feeling that she must also have had careful instruction in this branch of education. Lessons in this could apparently be had easily, for in 1701 £2 stg. is paid for James Baillie—Lady Grisell's brother-in-law—'lairning book-keeping in pairt,' and in 1714 either she or one of her daughters received lessons from Mr. M'Gie at a cost of £3, 2s. stg. If she did not receive lessons, she must have been a born book-keeper, for her accounts are remarkably able productions.

Her principal account-book was what she termed her 'Day Book,' but what would nowadays be termed a 'Cash Ledger,' for in it she did not enter her expenditure as it occurred from day to day, but her expenditure as specialised under separate headings. These headings vary from time to time, some of the less important being occasionally merged in others. The following may be taken as those of a fixed nature :—

I. Household Expenditure. This included all expenses in connection with food, drink, lighting, firing, washing and feeding of animals destined for table use.

II. Sundries, which included Education.

III. Servants' wages.

IV. Men-servants' Clothing.

V. Clothing for herself, husband, and children.

VI. Furniture and Furnishings.

The minor headings which occur in some years but which are merged under Sundries in other years are :—

I. Expenses of Horses.

II. Doctors and Surgeons.

III. Business Charges.

IV. Estate Expenditure.

V. Cess.

VI. Pocket-money.

It will thus be seen that Lady Grisell's 'Day Book' nominally embraces the whole of the family expenditure. Full details, however, are not given under the headings 'Household Expenditure' and 'Pocket Money.' The reason for this omission in the first case is that for small ordinary house expenditure Lady Grisell kept separate books, the monthly totals of which she alone posted to her 'Day Book'; in the second, the reason was probably that her husband, to whom the 'Pocket Money' was paid, kept no account thereof.

Lady Grisell left three 'Day Books' folio size, the first running from 1692 to 1718 inclusive, and containing 442 pages; the second from 1719 to 1742 inclusive, and containing 354 pages, and the third from 1742 to the date of her death (6th December 1746), continued by her daughter, Lady Murray. She also left books containing the accounts of expenses in connection with their journeys to Bath and to the Continent; Books containing Inventories of Bottles, etc.; a Book of Receipts; a Book of Bills of Fare; Books relating to estate management during the years 1742, 1743 and 1744, and many other Account and Memoranda Books. All are written in her own clear handwriting, the character of which was so well known that in 1706, when the leaders of the 'Squadron Volante' were corresponding in cypher, Secretary Johnston writes to Baillie, 'Write by an unknown hand; your wife's is as well known as your own.'

It will be easily understood that with such a wealth of material in these papers, the difficulty of selection has been great. After careful consideration, the Editor has resolved to deal mainly with Lady Grisell's first 'Day Book,' adding one or two selections from the other books. The reasons that have led to this choice are, first, that Day

Book No. 1 deals with that intensely interesting period of Scottish history immediately preceding and succeeding the Union of the Parliaments ; second, that it gives the expenses of living in Edinburgh, in the country, and in London ; and third, that it gives the accounts for old Mrs. Baillie's funeral and for the marriages of Lady Grisell's two daughters. Even this selected volume can only be dealt with by means of extracts, and much interesting matter has thus to be left out. An attempt has been made to remedy this by the formation of appendices drawn from the whole volume and by the notes which follow ; but such a method is at best unsatisfactory, taking as it were the flavour from the meat, and the Editor is only too conscious of its inadequacy.

Then as to the extracts themselves and their arrangement, it has been thought best not to select individual entries, which would have still further destroyed the character of the Accounts, nor yet to select individual years, which would have led in some cases to needless repetition, but to take as the unit of selection individual branches, choosing the most interesting of each respectively, and arranging these not chronologically as a whole, but, in order to facilitate reference, chronologically in their respective groups. Thus all entries dealing with any one subject, such as, say, 'Expenses of Horses,' will be found together.

As already stated, the Accounts begin about a year after the marriage of Mr. Baillie and Lady Grisell, that is, in the autumn of 1692, and are peculiarly rich in all sorts of information which can be most suitably referred to under separate headings.

I. RENTS OF HOUSES AND OF LODGINGS AND EXPENSES OF TRAVELLING

We learn from the Accounts that the young couple took up their quarters in a house in Warriston Close,¹ perhaps the same house which had belonged to Baillie's grandfather, Lord Warriston, and to which his father had turned on his way to execution with the remark to his sister-in-law, 'Many a sweet day and night with God had your now glorified father in that lodging or chamber.'² The rent paid for it was £200 Scots, or £16, 13s. 4d. stg., and the whole expenditure of their establishment, including upkeep of property, expenses of horses, journeys to London, etc., for the next three years averaged £430 per annum, which does not seem overmuch, according to our modern ideas, for a 'Baron,' as the county Members of Parliament were called. It must, however, be borne in mind that at this time the salary of a Judge of the Court of Session was only £300 (raised in 1707 to £500), while a Peer with an income of £500 a year could not plead poverty as an excuse for changing his politics.³

In 1697 old Mrs. Baillie died, leaving to her daughters, Helen Baillie or Hay and Elizabeth Baillie or Weems, her property, which consisted of household furniture and £50 stg. invested in the Darien Scheme.⁴ Her death set free her jointure of £102, 13s. 8d., and George Baillie and his family accordingly moved into a more expensive house belonging to Bailie Hamilton, at a rent of £38, 6s. Their flitting cost them 18s. 4d. Here they remained but a short time, moving in 1700 to a house belonging to Sir James Foulis of Colinton (generally known as Lord Colinton), which was probably situated in Foulis Close, and for which the rent was £33, 6s. 8d. This house they occupied until 1707, when they gave up living in Edinburgh and retired to Mellerstain. Mr. Baillie, however, came regularly to Edinburgh for the Assembly of the Church of Scotland, lodging either at Mrs. Room's ¹ (an excellent name for a lodging-house keeper) or Mrs. Marshall's, paying as a rule 5s. stg. per night :—‘ A chamber in Mrs. Marshalls 2s., candle, 2s., maid 1s., 5s.’

What added very considerably to Mr. Baillie's expenditure was the necessity of frequent journeys to London on political business. We find such entries as :—

1694. Augt. 1. Taken with me to England £948, 16s. (£79, 1s. 4d. stg.).

English road when I last came from London with the Secretary £80, 10s. (£6, 14s. 2d. stg.).²

1707. April 1. to London journey in his pocket 50 Guinys.

For to answer bills to London £103 stg. more.

To Mr. Watson for a bill sent to London to Jeris £2100, 4s. (£175, 0s. 4d. stg.).

There can be little doubt that when Baillie travelled by himself he rode, as there are constant references to the purchase, conveyance, and repair of ‘ Clog bags.’ On one occasion, at least (1714), he returned by sea to Newcastle, which cost him £3, 7s., whence he proceeded to Mellerstain by horse, the hire of these (three) costing him £2, 5s.

Then in addition to these business journeys there were constant journeys for health. In 1696 an expedition was made to Bath at a cost of £84, 0s. 9d. stg.³ The October of the following year they were at Prestonpans¹ at a cost of £18 stg., where they spent a considerable sum on ‘Scots tartan muslin.’ In 1701 they went to Scarborough from 9th July to 12th September, during which time meat and lodgings cost them £33, 6s. 8d. stg. From thence they brought back ‘Two barrils of souns and gullits,’² which cost 11s. (stg.) and 8s. 4d. (stg.) for carriage. It is curious to find Prestonpans a more expensive place of residence than Scarborough.

After the Union Baillie must have been more and more in London, for his daughter writes that ‘he strictly observed his attendance in Parliament and blamed those who made a bustle to get in and then absented themselves upon any pretence.’ Unfortunately we have no note of his expenses nor of the presents he always brought back to his children, unless the following are some of them :—

	For a black gown to Grisic	7 0 0
	For three night gowns to me and the bairrens	6 1 0
	For making the gowns by Madmosel Odinat	2 10 0

On the accession of George I., when Baillie became a Lord of the Admiralty, he moved all his family to London. Two servants, Tam Youll and Katie Hearts, were sent by sea, ‘fraught to London victuals furnished by the skipper £1, 10s.,’ and the heavy baggage, including four and a half barrels of herrings, was also sent by sea in three different ships at a cost of £3, 8s. The family went by stage-coach,³ five seats costing £22, 10s. and 2s. 6d. for booking money. A sum of £2, 7s. was paid for excess luggage, each person being allowed 20 lbs. free. The coach was apparently joined at Dunglass,¹ the Baillies taking with them 'little Robie Pringle,'² and the expenses of the six during the thirteen days which it took them to reach London were only £10. They arrived in London on 18th December 1714, and at first hired a furnished house at a rent of £14 per month. This they left at the end of June 1715, paying in addition to their rent 'To Mr. Brown for spoiling his furniture 10s. 2d.,' and took an unfurnished house, apparently at Chelsea, at a rent of £45 per annum. They must have taken the house as it stood, for the repairing of the roof, glazing of windows, painting and sundry 'reparations' were all paid for by them.

In August 1716 they paid one of their many visits to Bath. They travelled by coach via Oxford, the journey there and back to London costing £20, the servants and luggage going separately. Their lodgings there, four rooms and garrets, were at the rate of £2, 5s. 9d. per week. In addition to the entries relating to taking the waters, amusements, etc., there occurs the following:—'For cleaning all our teeth at Bath £1, 14s.'

As already stated, Rachel Baillie was married in 1717 to Lord Binning. As the marriage was to take place in Edinburgh, the family, five in number, left London on 5th August in a coach with six horses, which was to carry them to Scotland in nine days³ for £32, 15s. The expenses on the road on this occasion amounted to £14, 13s. 9d.

² Probably the son of Mr. Robert Pringle, Under-Secretary of State, who was the third son of Sir Robert Pringle of Stitchell.

³ This must have been very fast travelling for those days. In 1725 the hire of 'a close bodyed carriage and six horses' cost £30, and the journey took fourteen days. In 1717 the commissioners on the forfeited estates were each allowed £50 for their expenses on the road to Scotland.

LADY BINNING,

AGED 29.

(From a Portrait at Mellerstain by Maria Verelst.)

In 1729 the household were again resident at Mellerstain, and consequently the visit to Bath in that year was a much greater undertaking. The expedition consisted of a coach and six horses and eight riding horses, the journey from Berwick to Bath taking sixteen days. There were six of the family in the coach and two maids; and the cost of their provisions on the road amounted to £23, 18s. 6d. The board and lodging of seven men for the same period came to £5, 12s., or at the rate of 1s. per diem per head. while the cost of feeding the horses during the same period amounted to £30, 1s. 9½d. The horses got five days' rest at Bath, after which nine of them were sent back to Scotland under charge of 'Tam,' who got £14, 14s. for his expenses on the journey.

But by far the most important of their journeys was undertaken in 1731, when Lord Binning was ordered abroad for his health. Jerviswood, who was getting on in life, was by no means anxious to undertake the fatigues of a long foreign sojourn, but he yielded to the solicitations of his son-in-law, and on the 9th of June 1731 he and Lady Grisell, their daughters Grisie and Rachel, their son-in-law Lord Binning, and their granddaughter 'little Gris' landed at Rotterdam. They were accompanied by at least four servants, two women and two men, but it is a little difficult to gather the total number of the party, as friends seem to join and leave them. The accounts show clearly the course of their journey. They travelled by schuit or public canal boat, by diligence, by private carriage, and by chair. As was but natural, they made first for Utrecht, where Lady Grisell had lived in exile with her father, and where, in spite of poverty and anxiety, they had been a merry household. 'She had the greatest pleasure in shewing us every corner of the town, which seemed fresh in her memory; particularly the house she had lived in, which she had a great desire to see ; but when she came there they would not let her in, by no arguments either of words or money, for no reason but for fear of dirtying it. She offered to put off her shoes, but nothing could prevail, and she came away much mortified at her disappointment.' ¹

The first long stay was made at Spa, where they took lodgings at the 'Loup,' engaging their own cook. They must have found this house comfortable, for the party makes a still longer stay in it on their return journey. Here they took the waters, and here also they gave a ball and supper to '70 persons.' The expense of this latter amounted to £13, 4s. 5d., including £1, 11s. 6d. for the 'fidels' and 12s. for the 'Buckie' (bouquet). Then they moved on through Liége, Namur, Arlon (where we find the suggestive note 'imposed on'), and other places on the road south. Each little town provided its custom-house worries and 'searchers' to be squared, sometimes not altogether satisfactorily, as witness Champagne, where 'we was searched overly,' and Châlons, where 'we was stopd 3 days by the impertinence of the Bourro.' They reached Lyons on 11th October, and contracted to be conveyed to Turin partly by chaises and partly by chairs 'over the Alps cald Munt Sines.' (It will be noted that the sums entered for conveying the party from place to place generally include meals, sometimes two and sometimes three a day.) Then they passed through Milan, Parma, Reggio, Modena, Bologna (where it is refreshing to see the first entry of 11s. 9d. for 'sasageses'), Loretto, and so to Rome, where they arrived on 'the 23 Novr. at one o'clock of the day 1731.' On this occasion but a short stay was made in the Eternal City, the party pushing on to Naples, which was their objective, and which they reached on 5th December.

LORD BINNING,

At Naples they took a house at £8 per month, for which they had to supply china, glass, cutlery, napery, etc. They also hired a coach and horses at £8 per month, and engaged a cook and cook-boy, a maid, and M. Saverio and a 'Vanditor.' Here Lady Grisell at once set to work to learn Italian, her master being paid the munificent sum of 13s. 7d. per month! In regard to this her daughter writes: 'At Naples she shewed what would have been a singular quickness of capacity and apprehension at any age much more at hers. She knew not one word of Italian, and had servants of the country that as little understood one word she said; so that at first she was forced to call me to interpret betwixt them; but in a very little while, with only the help of a grammar and dictionary, she did the whole business of her family with her Italian servants, went to shops, bought everything she had occasion for, and did it so well that our acquaintances who had lived many years there begged the favour of her to buy for them when she provided herself; thinking and often saying she did it to much better purpose than they could themselves.'

As well as studying Italian, the Baillies at this time also studied music, and had much music copied, amongst which the music of Corelli is specially mentioned.

They remained in Naples until the beginning of May 1732, when they went for the summer to Portiche, again taking a house and having to provide a good many furnishings. On the 14th November they returned to Naples, where apparently they were joined by two of Lord Binning's sons and a second daughter, and where Lord Binning died on 27th December. The Accounts show the expense of the mourning, including a velvet nightgown for 'my D.,' which sounds strange to ears accustomed to the modern meaning of the word 'nightgown.' After this sad event chaises and saddlery were repaired, boxes purchased and got ready, accounts settled, and a start made on the homeward journey. Before leaving Naples, however, they sent home by ship a supply of hams, parmesan cheese, and macaroni. They also shipped home marble slabs to the value of £646, 16s. sterling.¹

They reached Rome on 29th March 1733, and remained there until 22nd April. Thence they proceeded to Florence, where Lady Grisell had the pictures already referred to of her husband, her daughter Grisie, and her two grand-daughters Gris and Helen painted by Mr. Martin for £11, 11s., and where she saw the ostrich in reference to which she afterwards notes for her grandsons, 'If you have any brass money in your pocket it will be very good for the ostrich.'² At Bologna they took a box in the Opera House, which they provided with a cushion and cloth; and at Venice they bought books and treacle! and attended amongst other things a 'Gundaliers' wedding, subscribing a shilling to the fiddlers. Thence through Verona, Trent, Innsbruck, Frankfort, Cologne, they worked their way back to Spa, where they again made a long stay, and then passing through Liège and Brussels to Paris they finally crossed over from Calais to Dover, carrying with them silver, lace, and clothes of all sorts.

Looking through these Accounts, one cannot but note the constant repairing required by the chaises, or 'cheases,' as Lady Grisell frequently writes it, the furbishing up of pistols and purchasing of sword belts, etc., indicative of the bad ¹ and dangerous state of the roads. It will also be noticed that even at that early stage in the history of tea the British matron refused to do without it, and seemed to have had little or no difficulty in obtaining it.

Amongst the purchases, 'beavor' skin stockings strike one as peculiar; and the number of pairs of spectacles purchased is also remarkable. It looks as if a pair must have been left behind by mistake at every stopping-place.

Amongst the books purchased abroad there are three cookery-books added to Lady Grisell's household library.

II. EDUCATION AND AMUSEMENTS

As is but natural, entries relating to 'Grisie' and 'Rachie' bulk largely in the Accounts. We cannot trace the career of 'Grisie' from her birth, as that event took place shortly before the Accounts begin, but we can follow the life of Rachie from its very dawn, when £2, 18s. stg. is paid to Mrs Scott the midwife, 9s. 8d. to Mr. Livingston for christening her, 3s. 8d. to the 'bathel of the Church,' and 4s. 10d. in charity, up to the date of her marriage in 1717, when £4, 6s. is paid 'To my Rachys Proclamation etc.,' and £1, 1s. 6d. 'For the garland that is brock over the Brid's head,' 'For Bryds favours £3,' and 'To the Brides Garter £1, 3s.'² We can watch the two sisters grow-

¹ 'I bought a chaise at Rome, which cost me twenty five pounds, good English pounds, and had the pleasure of being laid low in it the very second day after I set out. I had the marvellous good luck to escape with life and limbs; but my delightful chaise broke all to pieces, and I was forced to stay a whole day in a hovel while it was tacked together in such a way as would serve to drag me hither.' So writes Lady Mary Wortley Montagu from Naples on 25th November 1739.

² 'At the marriages of persons of the upper class favours were sewn upon the bride's dress. When the ceremony was concluded all the members of the company ran towards her, each endeavouring to seize a favour. When the

Then there are all the payments in connection with their education, and with Miss May Menzies who came 'at Lambis 1705 to wate on my children,' and who remained as a friend of the family presumably until her death.

Miss Menzies was the daughter of William Menzies of Raw, W.S., and her nominal salary was £8 stg. per annum, but 'I have always paid her £100 Scots' (£8, 6s. 8d. stg.). She was a devoted friend to her charges, for in 1709 Lady Grisell enters, 'To her over and above her fie for her care of the bairens when they had the fever' £27, 12s. 2d. stg., and there are also many entries of presents given to her, such as dresses, etc. Talking of her girlhood, Lady Murray writes as follows: 'We were always with her [Lady Grisell] at home and abroad, but when it was necessary we should learn what was fit for us; and for that end she got Mrs. May Menzies, a daughter of Mr. Menzies of Raws, Writer to the Signet, to be our governess, who was well qualified in all respects for it, and whose faithful care and capacity my mother depended so much upon, that she was easy when we were with her. She was always with us when our masters came and had no other thought or business but the care and instruction of us; which I must here acknowledge with gratitude, having been an indulgent though exact mistress to us when young; and to this time, it being now forty-five years that she has lived with us, a faithful, disinterested friend, with good confusion had ceased the bridegroom's man proceeded to pull off the bride's garter, which she modestly dropped. This was cut into small portions, which were presented to each member of the company.'—Roger's Scotland, Social and Domestic. We also learn from the same source that it was the custom when a bride of a more humble station entered her new home to break a cake of shortbread over her head, the fragments of which were gathered up by the young people and dreamed on. Perhaps the bride's garland here mentioned was a prettier form of the same custom.

sense, good temper, entirely in our interest, and that with so much honesty that she always spoke her mind sincerely without the least sycophantry.'

The following letter of instructions by Lady Grisell to Miss Menzies gives us some idea of her duties :—

Edinburgh, August 16, 1705.

Directions for Grisie given May Menzies

To rise by seven a clock and goe about her duty of reading, etc. etc., and be drest to come to Breckfast at nine, to play on the spinnet till eleven, from eleven till twelve to write and read French. At two a clock sow her seam till four, at four learn arithmetic, after that dance and play on the spinet again till six and play herself till supper and to bed at nine.

But the education of Grisie, poor mite, had begun long before this, and had been conducted partly at school and partly by special masters. On 10th November 1696, when she is just four years old, her reading master receives 4s. 10d. for the quarter, and her education in this branch is completed in 1701, when a payment of £1, 10s. is made 'to Porterfield to perfect Grisie in reading.' Mr. Thomson receives 9s. 8d. per quarter for teaching writing, Mr. Brown £1 for teaching arithmetic, and Mr. M'Gie £1, 1s. 6d. for teaching geography. We also read of 5s. 5d. as the quarter's fee for the reading school ; of 2s. 3d. for 'Rachies quarter at the School,' and of 4s. 10d. paid for 'the Bairens milk going to the School.' There is no mention of French lessons—except those given by Miss Menzies—until the family are in London in 1715, when 'Mistress Faucour' receives 10s. for a month's tuition and Mr. Dumbar £1, 1s. 6d. for the same.

Then there were dancing lessons, both for the children and, as already mentioned, for Lady Grisell herself. The children's lessons 'with the Frenchman' cost about £1, 3s. 8d. a month, just about half what was paid in London to 'Mr. Isaach for a months dancing to Rachie £3, 4s. 6d.'

xlvi HOUSE-BOOK OF LADY GRISELL BAILLIE

Then of course they go to the balls given by their dancing masters, and we read :—

1702. May. To Rachys Ball and Grisies . . .	£0	4	11
For a straw hat to Grisies Ball . . .	0	10	0
Gloves to them . . .	2	6	0
Cheries at the Ball . . .	0	10	0

We also find the rather suggestive entry : ‘ To Grisies master for coals ’ 1s. 2½d stg.

In addition to going out to dances they sometimes had the fiddlers in, for 4s. 10d. was paid ‘ To Thomson the violer for playing to the bairens a day,’ and 9s. 8d. was paid ‘ For the Kelso fiddlers 2 days at Mellerstains.’

Of course the fiddlers may have been employed for the pleasure of their music alone, for music was one of George Baillie’s delights, and one which was shared in by his wife and children. The musical education of the latter was certainly varied. ‘ Grisie ’ was taught to play the spinet, virginal, viol and harp. She was also taught singing and ‘ through bass,’ while ‘ Rachie ’ learns the spinet, virginal, and flute. ‘ Grisie ’ continued her musical studies long after her marriage, and we find her taking advantage of her stay in Naples, then one of the principal schools of music in the world, to prosecute them there. By the way, there was apparently no one in Edinburgh competent to mend a virginal, although there were tuners there, for in 1714 the ‘ fine virginal ’ has to be sent from Mellerstain to Leith and shipped to London to be repaired. The repairs cost £12, 10s. and the expenses of getting it there and back came to £2, 3s. 8d. How devoted the family were to music is shown from their Accounts while in London, which show constant entries for tickets for operas and concerts. They evidently belonged to the Handel faction, and not to that of his rival, Bononcini, for they patronise the concert of Castruchi, the leader of Handel’s Opera band, who was famous as a performer on the 'Violetta Marina,' an instrument of his own invention; and they go to hear Bernachi, 'Il Re dei cantatori,' take the part of Goffredo in Handel's 'Rinaldo,' and Berenstadt sing the bass part of Arganti. Evidently Bernachi, whose singing particularly appealed to the musically educated, was a special favourite of theirs. He presented them with a dog called 'Senorina,' and they presented him with a gold watch costing £25 and a gold chain costing £4, 10s. When her grandsons Lord Haddington and his brother went abroad in 1740, Lady Grisell specially directed them when at Bologna to 'ask also for Sig^{re} Barnachi the famous singer and Sig^{re} Sandoni the husband of the Cuzone,¹ they will be pleased to be of service to any of our family.'

Then they bought tickets from the famous singer Mrs. Anastasia Robinson, afterwards Countess of Peterborough, and they no doubt attended her weekly concerts in Golden Square, where were to be found 'all such as had any pretensions to politeness and good taste.'²

Concert tickets in London cost about 10s. each; while in Edinburgh we read of 'a concert to Grissie,' at various times costing 1s. 2½d. stg., 2s. 2d., 2s. 6d., etc.

Money was easily spent in London on less intellectual pleasures than music. Masquerades, a form of entertainment to which the king was partial, were naturally fashionable, and to many of these the Baillies went as 'Caposhins,' 'Pilgrims,' etc. Rachel was present as a 'Country Girl' at the famous masquerade at Montagu House, tickets for which were much sought after, and where 'there was a drawing-room for the King who was not there,' and 'where everything was in great order and magnificence,' and 'could not have cost less than five or six hundred pounds.'¹ Then they lost money at cards at the Dukes of Roxburgh and Montrose, at the Earls of Stair and Rothes, at Ladies Loudoun, Strafford, Mar, Dupplin, etc. They dined with the Prince and Princess of Wales, with the Dukes of Chandos and Hamilton, Sir Robert Walpole, Mr. Speaker Onslow, Mr. Doddington, and scores of other interesting people,² 'and were as usual in the first circles, Mr. Baillie's house being the resort of the best company and the rendezvous of many of the wits of that day.'³

We have mentioned how the Baillies accepted a present of a dog from Signor Bernachi, but we read in Lady Murray's Memoirs of another present which was not so well received. She writes: 'He had an infinite pleasure in giving even little trifling presents to his friends, but did not like receiving. If it was from any he thought had a view to his interest for them he would not suffer it though never so trifling. He made us return a parrot given us when he was in the Admiralty by a gentleman who was soliciting something there.' As to this Mr. Harry Graham writes: ⁴ 'To be given a parrot at any time is annoying, but when such a gift partakes of the nature of a bribe it becomes doubly offensive.' Mr. Graham, however, forgot when writing this that Mr. Baillie's fondness for animals was well known. An examination of Lady Grisell's accounts shows that the gentleman who presented the parrot was not such a simpleton as Mr. Graham not unnaturally concludes, for Mr. Baillie had a sufficient liking for parrots to pay 4s. 10d. for having one brought from Glasgow in 1703, and a reward of 2s. 'for finding the parrit,' when it escaped in 1704. Besides this parrot there were purchased in 1705 a mavis for 2s. 6d., 2 lint whites for 1s. 8d., and in 1713 the then large sum of £1, 10s. is paid for a 'mavis cage.' 'The dog Lyon' is purchased in 1718 for 2s. 6d., and in the same year 10s. 6d. is paid 'To teach Jessie the dog tricks.'

III. SERVANTS

The question of servants seems to have bulked as largely then as now. One is accustomed to talk of the good old-fashioned servant who came as a girl and died as a nuisance at an advanced age, but although there are occasional traces of this class of domestic to be met with in the Baillie Accounts, one is more struck by the constant changes in the household. In fact, those changes are so frequent that it is very difficult to judge of the size of the establishment,¹ and one is reluctantly driven to the conclusion that Lady Grisell was in some ways just too good a manager. For instance, there are eighteen different servants mentioned in the first three years of their married life, and that in an establishment consisting apparently of four women servants and a manservant. During the next ten years there are sixty different servants mentioned, of whom thirty-one do not remain a year and seventeen do not remain two years. When, after the accession of George I., the family took up its quarters in London, the same ill luck as to domestics followed them there. In 1715 there were no fewer than eight cooks: one remained a day, one a night, and one made out two months, ¹ In 1697 cess is paid for eight servants, and in London there were eight servants.

but was then carried away by the constables. The same misfortune overtook Hellen Williams the housemaid, who is charged with 8s. 2d. 'For constables and cariing befor a Justice of Peace.' No hint is given of their crimes, nor do we learn anything of their fate, unless this item in the following year's Accounts has reference to them:—'July 31. To the servants at Newgate Prison 2s. 6d.' In 1717 there were four cooks, one of whom stayed a night and one a fortnight and was paid for a month, which meant a good deal under Lady Grisell's careful sway. No wonder Lady Grisell when an old woman wrote to her daughter, Lady Murray: 'My dear, Stay till Saturday if Lady S. desires you, and tell her not to be uneasie at the disappointments in servants, for being a thing she will always meet, it would be a plague indeed if one laid it to heart. If she can lift her house to St. Giles's we should all live together and everyone serve another, but I would keep the purse and make them eat their meat in order. Our housemaid is so long that your sister has made two of her, for we have only her and the cook and I'm in no hope for a laundrimaid. You'll think I have said enough with a vomite on my stomach which is only by way of prevention.'¹

There are, as has been hinted, several notable exceptions to this short service system. May Menzies, the governess, to whom reference has already been made, remained all her life, and Tam Youll, the coachman, seems also to have been more or less of a fixture. Tam entered the Baillies' service in 1706 as groom, at a money wage of £1, 10s. stg. and his clothes, excepting linen. He eventually became coachman, and went with the family to London, where his wages were raised to £3. His career exemplifies another point in connection with Lady Grisell's household service, viz. the custom of fining the domestics for faults and charging them with any loss sustained through their carelessness or misconduct. Thus there is an entry in Tam Youll's account as follows: 1709. 'To him for George Dods loss of work when drunk and lam'd his leg £7, 4s. Scots.'¹ And George Dods's account for the same year contains this entry: 'March 25. For a velvet cap he spoilt £2, 8s. Scots.' In 1712 Tam is again in disgrace for having got drunk at Makerstoun, for which he is fined 10s. stg., the entry being, 'April 20. To him for excessive drinking.' In 1714 he meets with still severer punishment in connection with a mare which had apparently come by an accident through his carelessness, for he has not only to pay £1, 10s. stg. 'To the ferriers account,' but also 10s. stg. for the hire of a horse 'to the coch when the mare was spoilt'—£2 out of a money wage of £2, 10s. When his wife is ill a doctor and drugs are provided for her, but they are charged against him in his account—£1, 16s. 6d. It is the same with the accounts of all the other servants. They are carefully charged with anything provided or done for them or their families beyond the bargain of their service. They are fined for misbehaviour,² and have to pay for 'breakages' unless reported the same day.³

As this subject of servants is one of considerable interest, Lady Grisell's 'Memorandums and Directions to Servants'

² '1706. To James Carrin for wilful absence from his service, £3 Scots.' His wage was £30 Scots.

has been included in this volume. It is rendered still more interesting by there being given a table of their weekly diet—diet which would certainly not suit the servant of to-day. It will be observed that there is no such thing as butter allowed with their ‘oat loaf, broun bread or Ry.’

As already stated, it is difficult to gather from the earlier accounts how many servants were kept, but when the family were in London there appear to have been eight, and latterly at Mellerstain there must have been about seventeen, as is shown by a list of the servants as at Whitsunday 1740 :—

In Appendix II. will be found a note of the money wages paid to servants prior to 1718 as shown in the Accounts. In judging of the figures there given as applicable to Scotland, it is necessary to add to the money wage the value of two pairs of shoes supplied annually to each maidservant, and the value of all clothes except linen supplied to most of the menservants. The former may be taken as having been worth about 4s. stg. per annum and the latter about £2 stg. per annum.

‘Drink money’ or tips to servants of course figures largely, and there seems little doubt that this burden was even more oppressive then than now. As far as can be judged, ‘drink money’ per annum averaged about one-fifth of the annual wage-bill of the servants. The entry which gives the largest amount of drink money is in 1717, and is as follows: ‘For all drink money while at Edinburgh and travelling about the 6 moneths I was in Scotland £29, 10s. stg.’ This would represent something like £200 of the money of to-day, and strikes one as a large sum even for people in such a position as the Baillies, who were no doubt accompanied by two or three servants.

It is not only the amount of the drink money that is surprising; it is also the servants to whom drink money is paid. The recipients are nearly always nurses.¹ Of course one can understand that at a christening the nurse would be the natural person to tip, but the occasions cannot always have been christenings, even admitting how fashionable large families then were.

As already stated, the menservants received clothing, but it is a little difficult to give details of what was supplied, as in most cases material is purchased and made up by the tailor at a wage of 4d. a day and his food. Still it is possible to glean a certain amount of information. Duncan Bisset, whose wage was £2 per annum, received in 1702 shoes 4s., linen running drawers 1s. 3d., running shoes 3s. 2d., twil drawers 1s. 2 $\frac{2}{3}$ d., string 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., hat 4s. 6d., shirts

4s. 8d., cap 3s., drawers and gloves 2s. 8d., stockings 1s. 10d., a bonnet 1d., blue cloth for a coat £1, 14s. 3½d., for furnishing and making the same 4s. 8d. Duncan had to supply at his own expense 'linen to his neck,' which cost him 2s. 10d. In 1715 a suit of livery seems to have cost £4, 10s., and a big lined coat £2, 10s., while a suit of ordinary clothes for the barnman cost only £1.

We get another instance of Lady Grisell's careful management from such entries as the following: '1716. Nov. 16. For turning two coats into two waistcoats to George and Tam 10s.'

Board wages in Scotland were at that time 1s. a day, but this no doubt included lodging, as the cost of feeding a servant according to the dietary given by Lady Grisell on p. 277 works out at about 3d. a day. In 1716 the cost of feeding servants in England is given as follows:—

For meat to 4 servants when I was nine weeks at Bath from 8 Augt. till 8 Oct. from Betson	£0 15 2
For bread in that time	1 2 2
For candle, cheese roots, etc. in that time	0 6 6
For Bear	0 18 0
	£3 1 10

or nearly 1s. 9d. per head per week. Either the servants must have starved themselves in 1716 or they must have 'done' themselves uncommonly well in 1718, for under 8th October of that year we find the following corresponding entries:—

For meat to 4 servants for 6 weeks wt Mrs. Dundas [while] I was at Bath from Clements Butcher	£1 8
bread	0 9 1
drink 2½ barrill	1 2 6
sundry other provisions	2 12 3
	£5 11 10

This works out at 4s. 8d. per head per week.

IV. HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES

Under this heading, as already mentioned, Lady Grisell entered all expenditure in connection with provisioning, firing, lighting, and washing. Not only did she enter sums actually spent, but she also charged herself with the prices of all supplies drawn from the estate. These would no doubt be credited in some 'home farm' Account Book, but that has not been found. During the first years of her married life the details given under this heading are rather meagre, but they increase year by year, and are eventually very voluminous. It is, of course, quite impossible to refer to all the articles mentioned, and as the extracts from the Accounts may not give some of these, an attempt has been made by means of an appendix to keep a note of the most important of them and of their prices, though the Editor is aware that a tabulated state of this sort is apt to be misleading as it gives no indication of what was in common or only in occasional use. An attempt has also been made in the same Appendix to contrast, where data make it possible, the prices ruling in Scotland and in England in the early eighteenth century with those of the present day.

A careful examination of this part of the expenditure shows that on an average nearly a fourth of it was spent on alcoholic drinks, and that exclusive of the beer brewed at home. In Scotland, French wine (this may be another name for claret, although Lady Grisell seems to draw a distinction between the two), claret, canary, sack, mum, brandy, ale, and beer are the principal drinks and are bought in large quantities, while other wines and spirits, such as burgundy, aquavitæ, arrac, etc., are only rarely mentioned. In England, on the other hand, arrac and burgundy frequently figure, and champagne makes its appearance. These two latter wines are generally bought together and in the same number of bottles, rather indicating that they were got for special occasions.

Turning to temperance drinks, the first mention of tea in Lady Grisell's Accounts is in 1702, when a shilling is paid for a 'tee pot.' There is, however, a still earlier reference to tea in the Inventory of the furnishings of her mother-in-law's house in Edinburgh, which is dated 5th June 1696, and where we find mention of 'a whet (white) ern (iron) tee stop (stoup).' Little tea-cups to drink out of are also purchased in 1702, and a little 'yetlen¹ kettle' and spirits of wine for boiling the same.² In 1705 we have '2 dozen china plats, 2 dusin tee and jacolite dishes and a tee pot and basone bought by Greenknowe in Holland' £8, 2s. 6d. stg., and in 1706 1s. 4d. is paid for 'a pot for milk to tee.' We have thus the tea-table fairly complete. The first entry narrating the purchase of tea itself does not occur until 1708, when half a pound Bohea is purchased for £1. That is at the rate of £1, 9s. 1d. per pound avoirdupois. Probably prior to that date any tea got was purchased by Mr. Baillie when in London. With tea at such a price Lady Grisell naturally buys but seldom, and at first in half or quarter pound quantities, generally purchasing at the same time with Bohea an equal quantity of green tea, which cost about half as much. As the fortunes of the family improved and the price fell, tea was used more and more, and latterly figures pretty often in the Accounts. Coffee is mentioned in 1703, and a 'coper pott' for Coffee is entered in old Mrs. Baillie's Inventory of 1696. Chocolate is referred to as early as 1695. Fruits and confections are frequently bought, and occasionally 'taiblet for the bairens.'

² Spirit lamps are mentioned in old Mrs. Baillie's Inventory already referred to, where we find 'two coper things for holding of cotten to burn with wein.'

As to food supplies, not much need be said. With the exception of anchovies, which are only once purchased, the other items mentioned in the Appendix occur with more or less frequency. Herrings of course bulk largely, and many barrels of them are sent as presents to Mr. Secretary Johnston in London. It is curious to note that when in London Lady Grisell finds it cheaper to have barley, starch, washing blue, butter, shelled peas, indigo, etc., sent from Edinburgh.

Cows, oxen, calves, sheep, lambs, and pigs are also largely used for food, as well as fowls, domesticated and wild, the latter being purchased at all seasons. Unfortunately there are no data to enable us to contrast the prices of butcher meat in Scotland and England, but it will be noted that in England mutton is dearer per pound than beef, and the relative prices of cattle and sheep indicate that this also was the case in Scotland. Lady Murray gives us a carefully drawn up statement of the quantities of supplies consumed by the establishment for several years after Lady Grisell's death, two of which are given as specimens,¹ but when considering these, it must be borne in mind that Mellerstain was at that time the residence of ladies only.

Perhaps it is not inappropriate under this head to refer to the question of menus. Lady Grisell left a book of these 'Bills of Fair' as she calls them. They are peculiarly interesting from the fact that they give not only her own dinners, but the dinners of the friends by whom she was entertained, and further, the lists are made so as to show the position of the dishes on the table. A few of these are printed,² and it will be seen from them that two courses, a relief and dessert, constituted a formal dinner. All the dishes of each course were set down on the table, and a relief consisted of one or two dishes substituted for some of those of the first course. Sometimes Lady Grisell draws circles round the name of each dish to represent the plate. From these 'Bills' we see what was the dinner when the Baillies dined with the Prince and Princess of Wales at Richmond, with the Duke of Montrose, the Duke of Roxburgh, Bishop of Sarum, Duke of Chandos, Lord Stair, Lord Oxford, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, etc., and what the Baillies gave these great people when they in turn dined with them. It will be noted that in these menus there is only one mention of potatoes, and that in one of the foreign menus in 1733.

The House Accounts contain many other odd items of information. For instance, we find that Lady Grisell made her own ink, and excellent ink it was, out of copperas and galls, and her blacking for boots out of lamp black and beeswax. We learn that a barrel containing thirty salted cod cost £1, and a barrel of pickled oysters 2s. ; that out of thirty dozen oranges and twenty dozen lemons Lady Grisell had '8 gallons orange wine and large 12 gallons of panch and 2 doz. oranges besides to preserve'; that a flambeau cost from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 6d; that the salmon bill for the year amounted to £1, 7s. ; that tobacco cost 2s. and snuff 4s. a lb., also that the ladies used the latter. We find that in London, as coals were expensive, a cinder sieve was purchased, and charcoal and billets of wood were burned, and brushwood and roots used. In fact, the information is inexhaustible.

V. BUILDINGS, GARDENS, AND ESTATE MANAGEMENT

The picturesque old tower of Jerviswood had been the residence of George Baillie's father. There all his children had been born, and there his widow took up her residence when the estates were restored to the family. There is extant in the old lady's handwriting an Inventory of the furniture and plenishings at Jerviswood as at November 1694. It is an interesting and marvellously spelt document, and we learn from it how the various rooms were furnished, or rather unfurnished: witness the purple chamber, which contained only 'a very old bed all brok,' and 'My study,' which belied its title by containing nothing but water stoops, cups, coggies, spits, girdels, raxes, quiechs, etc. There was no drawing-room, 'My Chamber' having no doubt contrived a double debt to pay, and the dining-room held nought but 'en beg ern chemly [grate] with a bake' and 'a bege wenscott tebell and two fur tember one lesser.' Some of the windows would also appear to have been only half glazed, the lower half being a hinged wooden shutter, as indicated by there being 'In a beg pres' '4 pr of wendow bands' or hinges. Jerviswood and its furnishings, its 'three win glasses two of them wanting the foot,' was as typical of the Scotland that was passing as Mellerstain Tower, the Baillies' other residence, became typical of the Scotland that was coming.

As his mother was occupying the old family residence of Jerviswood, George Baillie had perforce to adopt Mellerstain Tower as his country residence. Unfortunately, there are no traces left of the latter place. It probably occupied the site of the buildings erected towards the end of the eighteenth century from the designs of R. and J. Adam, and united as these do now the two wings built by George Baillie. In spite of the beautiful roofs and exquisite woodcarvings of its successor, one cannot help regretting the disappearance of the old Tower, the top of which we learn from the Accounts was so carefully repaired every year.

Probably during old Mrs. Baillie's lifetime this old Tower was even less comfortable than Jerviswood, but she had not long been dead, and the estates freed of her jointure, before extensive repairs and additions began to be made to it. During the years 1701, 1702, and 1703 £217, 12s. 4d. was spent on repairing the Tower and offices. Each following year something was added. In 1706 there is paid 6s. for measuring off '33 acres, 3 ruds, 17 f. 8 ells for a park,' and in 1708 the park dykes are built at a cost of £54, 9s. 5d. In 1709, looking to the times, this most extraordinary entry occurs: 'Expense of building the Bath house £65, 4s. 4d.' In 1711 a new kitchen is built which apparently had a thatched roof. And so the additions go on.

Nor is the garden or planting neglected. In 1701 young trees are bought for 3s. 4d. from 'Hundalie,' and fir seed is frequently got—sometimes from London. The price of the latter seems to have varied considerably, from 2s. per lb. in 1704, to 15s. in 1711. There is a nursery formed at Jerviswood, and large numbers of young trees purchased for there and Mellerstain—limes, yews, thorns, planes, elms, geans, firs, chestnuts, walnuts, and fruit trees. Acorns are also got. In 1712 we have one of Lady Grisell's characteristic entries: 'For young trees bought by John Hope which was a perfit cheat £2, 10s.' and in 1715 we read of 1s. 8d. being paid 'For nailing up the vine tree.'

There were evidently a few well-grown trees still left in Scotland at this date, in spite of the general belief to the contrary, as shown by such entries as: 1703. 'Repairing tenants house in part,' 'all timber being cut in the wood,' and again in 1709, 'To James Blakie 2 days at Langshaw cutting timber.'

Unfortunately, little or no detail is given of seeds purchased for the garden. Of vegetables, spinach, peas, and parsley are mentioned, and of flowers anemones, ranunculuses, jonquils, and tulips.

A bowling-green is laid out in 1710 and 1711, at a cost of £7, 3s. 1d., on which the peacock purchased in 1704 no doubt displayed itself.

The entries in regard to the enclosing of land are of interest, the first occurring in 1699, when £4 is paid for putting up one of the park dykes, and later on there are entries of abatements granted to tenants for ‘dykes, eaten corns and cart roads.’ The cost of building a dry stone dyke was 1s. per rood,¹ as compared with about 1s. per yard nowadays, and Lady Grisell took care to see that she got a good job, as witness the following document :—

Be it known that whereas I George Cairncross Mason in Selikrete being imployed by the Right Hon. Lady Grisell Baillie on building these dry dykes at the strype being southward from the towne[?] hill at Mellerstain but there being thirty roods of the said dyke that are builded with small stones and thereby is not [sic] found not to be good and sufficient I therefore do hereby bind and oblige myself to hold good and sufficient the said thirty roods of dykes during the space of twentie years under the paneltie of five pounds Sterling given at Mellerstane this twentie-ninth day of Novem^r 17 hundred and forty-three years before these witnesses Wm. Lamb and George Carter servants to the said Lady Grisell Baillie.

GEORGE CARTER, Witness.

The most startling figures, however, in those Accounts are those relating to the building of cot-houses. Even assuming them to have been no better than the dwellings described by John Ray, ‘pitiful cots built of stone and covered with turfs having in them but one room, many of them no chimneys, the windows very small holes and not glazed’—even at this the prices paid for the erection of some of them strike one as ridiculously small. In 1696 a cot-house is built for 'Liddas the Marchant' at a cost of £1, but it must have been a building of a superior class, for in 1702 James Ormiston's cot house is built for 4s., and we find mention of others costing 11s. 1d., 5s., and 14s. 4d. In 1714 many of the details of building the 'new house' are given, the cost of which amounted to £4, 12s. 3d. This house was of a superior order, and was glazed with 'ches losens'—presumably small square panes of glass instead of diamond-shaped ones.¹ There can be little doubt that the low price at which cot-houses were erected is accounted for by the fact that the building material consisted largely of tuft divots, the supply of which is so often referred to. Divots, no doubt, also formed the roofing of these miserable dwellings, although the larger houses were either slated or thatched. In 1709 there is an entry dealing with the slating of Langshaw House, and in the same year we read of straw being supplied for the thatching of Mellerstain, 'For 85 threve oat stra crop 1707 @ 6s. to sting the house,' £2, 2s. 6d. stg., and of heather being got for the thatching of the Church of Earlston, 'For hather and thicking of the church,' 7s. stg.

VI. FURNITURE AND FURNISHINGS

The purchases of furniture and furnishings for the Baillies' Edinburgh house, for Mellerstain, and for their house in London, are given in great detail, and show a good supply of most of our modern requirements. Mr. Henry Grey Graham, in his Social Life of Scotland in the Eighteenth Century, refers to the lack of drinking glasses, and, as already mentioned, there would appear to have been a lack of these at Jerviswood. But in George Baillie's establishment there were plenty of single wine-glasses purchased at 5d. each, double wine-glasses at 8d., ale-glasses at 1s., water-glasses at 1s., and decanters at 4s. each. There was also a glass churn which cost 1s. 8d., and which strikes one as a curious thing. Then there are scarlet carpets (1696), and in London oil-cloth for the dining-room floor ; window curtains of crape, calico, muslin, and damask ; arras hangings of plush, etc., which in 1712 began to give place to wallpaper, for we read of three ' pices of stamped paper ' being purchased at 2s. 6d. each, and five ' pice varnished paper ' at 13s., and in the following year twenty-five ' pices of stamped paper ' for £4, 6s. This must be an early use of wallpaper, but the two following entries dealing with bells are still more interesting : 1696. ' For a bell and cord to the door ' 2s. 5d. stg., 1705. ' For a bell to the low room ' 2s. stg. The first of these clearly indicates a hanging front door bell instead of a tirling pin or knocker, while the second seems to indicate a bell communicating with the servants' quarters. As hanging bells in houses are said to have been unknown in France until the beginning of the eighteenth century, and were not introduced into England until the reign of Queen Anne, these two entries are distinctly worthy of note.

The decoration of rooms with mirrors was evidently much in fashion, and there seems to have been tradesmen in Edinburgh capable of making these, for in 1704 we read of £3, 1s. 6d. paid for a ' Chimney glass and silvering ' ; and again in 1709, 14s. paid for ' silvering the chimney glass.' Still the Edinburgh mirrors cannot have been equal to the London ones, for ' Chimney and pannel glass ' to the value of £10, 17s. 10d. was shipped to Leith in that same year, and when the Baillies furnished their London house wall mirrors played a most conspicuous part in its decoration.

VII. LAWYERS AND DOCTORS

We get from these Accounts a considerable amount of information as to the fees paid to counsel and to agents. In December 1694, the King's Advocate, Sir Gilbert Elliot, gets £8, 8s. for four consultations ; in April 1696 he is paid a fee of £1, 6s. 2d. for a consultation ; in January 1696 he is paid a fee of £5, 5s. ; and in November of the same year he is paid £3, 3s. for drawing two Deeds of Entail of Mr. Baillie's estates. Lawyers will note that the client consults counsel and pays his fees without the intervention of an agent, and that the Lord Advocate did not require, as he does now, to have a junior conjoined with him in a consultation. It is a little difficult to compare the charges of Mr. Baillie's solicitor, Mr. Chiesly, with those prevalent nowadays, as documents and business were of such a different nature. We do, however, learn that in 1705 2s. 5d. is paid for drawing a Bond and two Back Bonds, and 4s. 10d. for writing a Bond in the following year. In 1707 John Wood is paid 4s. 1d. ' for writing 2 mens tacks and a Court at Langshaw,' so we may safely assume that solicitors were no more overpaid than were the Judges of the Court of Session. It is interesting to note that Jerviswood was granting tacks of his land, a custom which did so much to improve agriculture in Scotland, but which was at that time only just coming into practice.

The fees paid to doctors and surgeons compare favourably with those paid to lawyers. Fees of 11s., £2, 2s., and £3, 3s. are common, and the practice of bleeding must have yielded to the surgeons a regular and remunerative return. The ordinary charge in Scotland for bleeding a member of the family was 9s. 8d., and for one of the servants, 4s. 10d. If the luxury of being bled from the ' Jouglar vain ' was indulged in, it was more expensive, costing £1, 1s. 6d. In England the bleeding was done at the Bagnio or Baths, such entries as 'For cupping Rachy in the Banyo 5s.' being of frequent occurrence. The Bagnio in Edinburgh, situated in the Canongate and kept by one Rees, which is mentioned two or three times, did not apparently undertake surgery, but, curiously enough, it was possible to get accommodation there for the night, for in 1707 we read: 'For lodging 2 nights in the Bainio and 4 times bathing' £1, 4s. stg. Head baths could also be obtained, for £1 is paid to Mr. Knox for 'head baths.' These Bagnios or Baths were no doubt of the nature of Turkish Baths, and those in Edinburgh are referred to also in the Account Book of Sir John Foulis.¹

The frequency with which the Baillies took these baths and went to watering-places, and the large quantities of mineral waters that appear so frequently in the accounts. 'Spa Water,' 'Scarborough Water,' 'Queen of Hungry Water,' etc., indicate that either Lady Grisell or her husband or both were troubled with rheumatism or gout.

It is also to be noted that in 1705, when 'Rachy' is ill, a special nurse is got for her at a fee of 5s.

Two or three entries occur relating to the syringing of ears, which are explained by the fact that Mr. Baillie gradually became very deaf. Indeed, his increasing deafness was the reason given for his retirement from the Treasury.

It is impossible to leave this subject without a reference to dentistry. Throughout the Accounts no mention is made of the purchase of a tooth-brush, although the family go occasionally to a dentist to have their teeth 'cleaned,' at which times powder is mentioned as being purchased. Thus in 1709 : 'To teeth cleaning each half a crown and puders' 14s. '1717. To cleaning all our teeth at Bath £1, 14s.' Visits are also paid to the dentist for still more unpleasant purposes, as witness the entry in 1705 : 'For stopping teeth with lead and something to clean 'em 10s.'; and the entry in 1717 : 'July. to Vilponta for drawing Grisie's tooth 10s. 9d.'

VIII. HORSES AND CARRIAGES

The Baillie expenses in connection with the keep of horses and upkeep of carriages and harness in Scotland averaged for the years 1692 to 1714 about £35 per annum, exclusive of the wages of coachmen and grooms. As there were certainly four coach mares, besides hunting mares and a cart horse, it may be taken that this figure covered the keep of at least seven horses, and that consequently the keep of a horse for a year was under £5. As the Baillies bred their own horses, there are not so many entries dealing with their purchase as one might otherwise have expected. The highest price given for a horse is £22, 4s. 5d., paid in 1696 for a gelding. A pony for Grisie cost £3, 6s. 8d.; horses £10, £9, 14s. 8d., and £7; a mare £4, 8s. 11d. Colts are gelded at 2s., although, as Lady Grisell explains, the usual price is 1s., rumping costs 1s., and bleeding, which is of frequent occurrence, 10d.; while stallions for the mares cost £2, 2s. (Bath). Coach harness for a pair of horses cost in 1705 £4, 16s., in 1702 a leather side saddle is bought for 12s., while in 1712 'a fine sadle to Grisie yellow velvite trim'd with silver' costs £13; a pad saddle and furniture in 1701 costs £2, 2s., and a 'clog bag¹ saddle' and all its furniture costs, in 1704, 17s. 4d.

When the Baillies were first married, the carriage they owned was a 'berlyn,' a light carriage capable of containing two persons, said to have been invented about forty years before by 'Philip de Chiese, a native of Piedmont in the service of Frederick William, Elector of Bradenburg.'¹ In 1699, however, a chariot is purchased in London, whence it is brought to Edinburgh, at a cost of £5, 3s. The price of the chariot unfortunately is not given. Some idea of the state of the roads is obtained from the constant mention of purchases of glass for the chariot, and the frequency with which new wheels have to be got. These latter cost £5 a set, and on one occasion are bought at St. Andrews, and on another are made by the local workmen at Mellerstain.

The coach itself does not last long, for in 1704 it gets such a complete overhaul that, after reading the details, one wonders how much of the original coach was left.²

In spite of having had 'her' so thoroughly repaired, a new chariot is purchased and brought from London next year. This new chariot seems to have been not altogether a success, and must have been the subject of some complaint, for Mr. Secretary Johnston writes in regard to it: 'There could be no knavery in your Chariot considering the price of it, and since you saw it before it was covered, the wood, as it often happens, may not have been seasoned enough; none but workmen can judge of that.' Although the Baillies imported their carriages from London, it is evident that coaches of a sort could be procured in Scotland, for in 1707 we read: 'To King Coachmaker for helping ¹ A Book about Travelling, Past and Present, by Thomas A. Croal. It was in the Berline of Baroness de Korff that Louis XVI. and his queen attempted to escape from France.

² 1704 Oct. 26. For helping and dighting the coch £1 8/, nails to the coch 10/, Axe tree £5 8/.

For a hind axe tree £4 6/, a pair fitchers £4 10/.

For a transem £3, lining the bottom £2, 2 rollers 6/, mending £1 12/.

For 2 skins £1 8/, nails to her 14/2, drink 2/ (Scots money).

the Chariot, the money sent to Edinburgh by Francis Newton'¹ 15s.

When the family went to London, towards the close of the year 1714, they did not take their own carriage, but travelled by the stage-coach. It was thus necessary for them, on their arrival in London, to purchase a coach, which they did from one 'Mr. Baldwine,' at the price of £55, which was paid by instalments. Instead of horsing this themselves, they hired a coachman and two horses at £25 per quarter. Judging from the amount of chariot glass appearing in the London Accounts the streets of that city were not much better than those of the northern capital.

It will be noticed in Lady Grisell's 'Memorandum' as to travelling on the Continent, that when the chaises² arrive at Trent, 'you must put an avan train to your Chaise,' 'you cannot travel without these fore carriages, they not been used to drive as in Italy.'

It is evident from the directions which Lady Grisell gives her grandsons as to the careful adjustment of the 'avan train' that the chaises proceeded through Germany with six wheels each. These 'avan trains' were necessary in order to provide a seat for the driver, the chaises until Trent was reached having been driven by postillions, and Lady Grisell gave directions that they are to be got rid of at Cologne or Frankfort.

It will also be noted from the same 'Memorandums' that it was considered hardly worth while to bring these travelling chaises across the Channel, they being 'but unwildy and troublesome in our country,' therefore 'sell them for what you can get.'

² A chaise could be bought for £25.

One word as to carts ! Mr. Henry Grey Graham, in his Social Life of Scotland in the Eighteenth Century, gives a description of tumbrils, which he said were regarded as ‘a triumph of mechanism when the century was young.’ He goes on to say : ‘Carts were a later institution ; and when in 1723 one carried a tiny load of coals from East Kilbride to Cambuslang, crowds of people, it is recorded, went out to see the wonderful machine ; they looked with surprise and returned with astonishment.’ ‘Yet in many parts of the Lowlands they did not come into use until 1760.’ This may have been so in certain districts, but in Edinburgh carts capable of carrying half a ton of coal seem to have been common enough. In 1696 ten carts of coal are brought from Carberry ; coals are constantly being carted from Leith ; in 1701 a ‘cart and all that belongs to it’ is purchased for £4 ; and in 1704 a new axle-tree is got for the cart. Both the price paid and the last entry show clearly that the Baillies’ cart was not a tumbril, but had wheels revolving independently of the axle-tree, and there is no reason for assuming that it was in any way superior to the other carts mentioned.

IX. CLOTHING

It is a little difficult for a mere man to form an opinion in regard to matters of feminine clothing, and it is dangerous to express it when formed. The first thing that strikes one in looking through the Clothing Accounts is the change that has taken place in the meaning of the word ‘night gown.’ We find nightgowns of damask, of stained satin, of yellow satin, of striped satin, of calico, of velvet, etc., all lined with various materials, and costing anything from £1 to £5. They are frequently given as presents. George Baillie brings back ‘night gowns’ from London for his wife and daughter, and ‘night gowns’ are given to his wife's sister 'Jeanie,' and to his sister Mrs. Weems, costing respectively £3 and £2, 15s. From the number that are bought they are evidently more than dressing-gowns, and from the fact that elaborate ones are also purchased for Mr. Baillie himself, the term can hardly be synonymous with 'an evening gown.' In the case of ladies, it was probably a sort of tea-gown; and in the case of men, a dressing-gown for more or less public wear. It was no doubt in this sort of 'night gown' that Robert Baillie was tried and hanged, and not in the garment we now understand by the words.¹

What would be now termed 'nightgowns' are called in the Accounts 'night clothes,' and were made of muslin or cambric.

In the matter of underclothing, the Accounts show but cold comfort, and it is with a sense of relief that one reads of the occasional purchase of flannel. No doubt the material for woollen underwear was woven at home, as we find frequent references to the purchase of wool, sometimes bought specifically to be 'made into flannel.'

Stockings of cotton, wool, and silk are purchased at prices ranging from 1s. 1d. to 14s. per pair, the finer kind being worn over woollen understockings. When abroad, specially thick stockings for travelling are bought, as are also stockings of beaver skin, which cost three florins (7s.) the pair. One would be inclined to doubt the meaning of the word, but a few entries further on 'baver skin gloves' are purchased, and 'baver' for a 'peticoat and clock,' the former costing 1s. 10d. per pair, and the latter £2, 19s. 3d. It will also be noted from the snuff-boxes and handkerchiefs purchased for the ladies that snuff was used by them as well as by the men.

On p. 203 and p. 213 will be found the trousseau accounts of Lady Murray and Lady Binning respectively, the bridal dress of the one, 'a sute clothes trim'd with silver,' costing, along with her sister's dress and some other items, £112, 8s. 6d., and of the other, 'For 25 yards silver stuff for gown and coat,' costing £41, 5s.

A plain suit of clothes for a gentleman cost between £4, 10s. and £7, but of course if expensive materials were used the cost might be anything. The accessories to the suit, such as the lace for cravats and ruffles, often cost more than the suit itself, on one occasion, in London, as much as £20, 5s. being spent on a cravat and two pairs of ruffles. A muff with its case was also a necessary part of a gentleman's equipment.

Wigs naturally figure frequently. We have campaign wigs at about £1, 5s., long wigs at £2, 5s., and undesigned wigs at £3, 5s. Then there are the concomitant nightcaps of wool or double holland for keeping warm shaved heads. Here also we notice Lady Grisell's careful hand. Nothing is thrown away that can be repaired: 'Helping the forehead of a wig' 5s.; 'Helping a wig and shaving 8s. 7d. stg.'; 'Turning my poplin gown'; 'Dying red gown green'; 'Making up the old floord night gown,' etc.

X. JERVISWOOD'S BROTHERS AND SISTERS

When George Baillie was restored to his family estates he became responsible for the payment of his mother's jointure of £102, 13s. 8d., and of the provisions made by his father for his younger children, amounting to 43,000 merks or £2388, 17s. 9d. stg. Along with her other accounts Lady Grisell kept an account of how this money was paid away to, or for the benefit of, the beneficiaries, and these Accounts give us some information on a different and not so pleasant side of eighteenth century life. It is evident from them that Jerviswood's immediately younger brother Archibald was not altogether a satisfactory character. At one time or another he was reduced to pawning his coat, his Bible, and, still more reprehensible, his brother's watch, which various articles were redeemed at the cost of 10s., 8s. 4d., and 12s. 6d. respectively. He eventually lands in the Tolbooth, presumably for debt, when we find the following entry: 'To him by Plumer when he was in ye Tolbooth £54, 8s. Scots' (£4, 10s. 8d.). If this sum was paid for his maintenance, and it looks as if such were the case, and if the expense of his board 'inside' was in any way commensurate with his board outside, he must have been in durance vile for some time, as his board, lodging, and pocket-money for six months when at liberty only cost about £10.

Evidently some sort of special arrangement had to be made about Archibald, as a separate account is kept for him long after his brothers and sisters have been paid off and their names have disappeared from the Accounts.

Just as the Accounts for Archibald cease, that is, about 1708, Lady Grisell opens an account in her ledger for 'Rachell Dundas.' No clue is given as to who this was, but she was probably a daughter of George Baillie's sister Rachel, who married Patrick (?) Dundas of Breistmilne. This child apparently possessed a little money, which Lady Grisell administered for her, and her name figures through the Accounts for several years. She went with the family to London, and she and Miss Menzies are occasionally sent to the theatre together: '1715. Ap. 6. For a play to Rachel Dundas and May Menzies gallerie 4s.'; 'Two gallerie tickets to ane opera 3s.'; 'To Rachel Dundas for going to a play 4s.,' etc. Looking to the small amount spent on her and on her amusements in comparison with her cousins, one is afraid she must have felt somewhat of a Cinderella.

XI. GENERAL REMARKS

Having dealt with Lady Grisell's Accounts more or less in detail, it may not be out of place to add a word or two upon them as a whole. In Appendix v. will be found a statement showing the yearly expenditure under its various heads from 1693 to 1718 inclusive, and as far as possible giving the yearly income for the same period. The note of expenditure has been made up from Lady Grisell's Accounts, and may be taken as accurate, except in regard to the figures under headings 'Pocket Money' and 'London Expenses.' The former one feels can hardly give the whole of the pocket-money spent by Jerviswood, and the latter is certainly incorrect, for Baillie was in London every year after the Union attending to his parliamentary duties, and there is no mention of the expenses of these visits in the Accounts. With these exceptions, the figures give a fair idea of the expenditure of a country gentleman immediately preceding and succeeding the Union.

The figures setting forth Baillie's income are derived partly from balance-sheets, which were prepared periodically every few years either by Lady Grisell or her husband, and which give the rental of his estates together with a note of his investments and debts, and partly from the Records, which mention the salaries attaching to the various posts held by him.

In considering any of the branches of the expenditure it is always necessary to take a few years together, as wages and accounts are often left unpaid for several years, probably from the scarcity of coin. For instance, in 1707 'May Menzies' receives two years' wages; in 1717 'John Hume Garner at Mellerstaine' is paid his wages for three years; in 1709 Torwoodlee is paid £8 for a horse 'got 10 years since,' and there are many similar entries, although in the last case the length of delay is exceptional. Whether it was this want of ready money, or whether it was a legacy from his days of adversity, it is impossible to say, but certain it is that George Baillie had in December 1695 to redeem a gun from pawn at the small sum of 2s. 10d.¹

The average expenditure in Scotland for the years from 1693 to 1714, exclusive of sums spent on estate management and expeditions to London, works out at rather under £550 sterling per annum, and it is strange to think of this sum being able to finance an establishment in which the number of servants must have averaged at least ten, and which boasted a carriage and four, besides hunters.

This naturally raises the question as to the relative value of money then and now, a difficult question, the answer to which alone can enable us to compare the prices of two hundred years ago with those of to-day, and to say that such and such an article was dearer or cheaper then than now. It is a problem that can be attacked in various ways, but for the purposes of this book it is perhaps sufficient to examine it from the charge side of the account, that is, from a study of what a man or woman was able to earn for labour, whether manual or mental: approached from this side an article may be said to be dear or cheap as its price varies to the earning capacity of the individual. If, therefore, we can find any fairly common ratio existing between salaries and wages of the various trades and professions then and now, we shall at least be enabled to judge by it whether any special commodity has increased or decreased in value from a purchaser's point of view. Now it will be seen from Appendix iv., which has been prepared from the Accounts of Lady Grisell and from other sources, and which the Editor is well aware is far from exhaustive, that the salaries and wages therein referred to have increased from six- to ten-fold. It will also be seen that the increase in the wages of domestic servants, taking into account the cost of the clothes supplied and the cost of their maintenance, both relatively greater then than now, lies somewhere between the same two figures.

Let us therefore take eight, the mean of these two figures, as representing the decrease in the power of money to buy the services of men and women, and let us multiply by eight the price of any article in 1707 before comparing it with the price of to-day. The result should enable us to judge fairly accurately whether it has increased or decreased in value.

As long as income was spent on the employment of labour, such as servants, tradesmen, doctors, lawyers, etc., our ancestors were just as well off as we are to-day. The same may also be said in regard to one or two items, such as farmyard produce, keep of horses, etc., but, as will be seen from Appendix i., the cost of nearly every other commodity was relatively much dearer then than now. Even the staff of life, oatmeal, which costs now about 17s. the boll, cost then about 10s., that is, it was then relatively nearly five times dearer. This merely brings us to what we know already, namely, that our incomes go much further now than then, and that we are consequently much better off.

Mention has been made of the periodical balance-sheets made out by George Baillie. In these Baillie valued his landed estates at so many years' purchase, gave a list of his investments, and a note of the debts due by him.

In 1693, Jerviswood and Mellerstain were both valued at twenty years' purchase, but the value of the latter was raised in subsequent statements to twenty-two years' purchase. In 1736 the Barony of Earlston was bought from Lord Haddington at twenty-five years' purchase, and in the same year the superiority of some subjects in Earlston was acquired at twenty-one and a half years' purchase. The following is rather a curious entry in relation to land purchase. Baillie, who had bought the estate of Westfauns for £2000, afterwards acquired the 'Snyp Rights upon it,' for £432, 4s. 7d., seeming thus to indicate that they were separable possessions.

These balance-sheets show that it was not until after the Union that Baillie began to save money, and that these savings he generally laid out in the purchase of land. His first balance-sheet in 1693 shows that he was worth £8037; his last in 1736 that he was worth £37,724.

Although it does not fall within the scope of this paper to treat of the effects which the Union of the Parliaments had upon Scotland, it is a subject which naturally bulks largely in the study of the career of George Baillie. In his own correspondence we learn that he foresaw much of what happened, but he probably did not see one effect, that is, the injury inflicted upon Scotland through the practical removal from her capital of such men as Baillie of Jerviswood and his father-in-law, the Earl of Marchmont. They saw no sin in the innocent enjoyment of music, singing, and dancing. We have already noted how George Baillie got in the fiddlers to play to his bairns, and Lady Murray gives the following delightful picture of her grandfather: 'As mirth and good humour, and particularly dancing, had always been one characteristic of the family when so many of us were met, being no fewer than fourteen of his children and grandchildren, we had a dance. He was then very weak in his limbs and could not walk downstairs, but desired to be carried down to the room where we were to see us; which he did, with great cheerfulness, saying, "Though he could not dance with us, he could yet beat time with his foot," which he did, and bid us dance as long as we could; that it was the best medicine he knew, for at the same time that it gave exercise to the body, it cheered the mind. At his usual time of going to bed he was carried upstairs and we ceased dancing for fear of disturbing him; but he soon sent to bid us go on, for the noise and music, so far from disturbing, that it would lull him to sleep. He had no notion of interrupting the innocent pleasures of others, though his age hindered him to partake of it. His exemplary piety and goodness was no bar to his mirth; and he often used to say none had so good a reason to be merry and pleased as those that loved God and obeyed his commandments.' ¹

Both of these men were prominent Presbyterians, who had suffered for the cause, and whose principles were beyond suspicion. They were powerful socially, they were powerful politically, and their example, and the example of others like them, might have done at least a little to counteract the bigotry and despotism of the Presbyterian ministers, whose influence for so many years cast a shadow over Scotland.

The Editor begs to acknowledge his indebtedness to some notes left by the late Mr. Fitzroy Bell, into whose experienced hands the editing of Lady Grisell's papers had been entrusted, but whose untimely death prevented him from making more than a beginning of what would have been to him a most congenial task. The Editor's thanks are also due to Dr. Maitland Thomson, Mr. A. O. Curle, Mr. Mill of the Signet Library, and many other friends, for much valuable help.

He also feels that he owes an apology to Lady Grisell for prying into books which were never meant to be seen. If Lady Grisell is cognisant of what goes on here, she is no doubt amazed, amused, and annoyed at the many wrong deductions which have been drawn from the Accounts, over which she must have spent so much time and trouble, and which she must have thought so clear.

¹ George Ridpath, Whig journalist, published a system of shorthand, wrote many party pamphlets and books, was obliged to fly the country in 1713 for a series of articles in the Flying Post and Observer. Lord Grange writing of him after his death states that 'his memory is not savoury here. I'm sorry he was so vile for he once did good service.' Frequent payments are made to him through these accounts, and he is often mentioned in the Jarviswood Correspondence.

¹ 'In the winter of 1715-16 the frost was again so intensely severe that the river Thames was frozen over during almost the space of three months. Booths were erected on the congealed river for the sale of all kinds of commodities and all the fun of the fair of 1684 was revived. On 19 January 1716 two large oxen were roasted whole on the ice.'—Old and New London, by Edward Walford.

Debursments in bussiness, 1697.		Scots
January	To Sir Gilbert ¹ 5 guinys	0075	00	00
	To Sir Gilberts man for writing informations in the bussiness of Ridhall	0001	09	00

¹ Elsewhere called Dr. St. Clair. Probably Dr. Matthew St. Clair of Herdmanston, East Lothian, the ancestor of the present Lord Sinclair. He was a deputy-lieutenant of East Lothian, and was in command of the party who went to interview Mr. Hepburn of Humble, who in 1715 was considered as likely to join the rising. In the skirmish which followed Keith's younger son was killed, 'the first that was killed in the late rebellion.'—Rae's Rebellion. In revenge the Highlanders plundered Herdmanston House 'of everything valuable which they could carry with them.'—Rae's Rebellion.

MY FATHER-IN-LAW ¹

ROBERT BAILLIE of Jerriswood, Esqr. was eldest son to George Baillie of Jerriswood. His Mother was sister to Sir Archibald Johnston Lord Warriston. After having been educated in the Universitys of Scotland he went abroad to study the law, and, being at Paris when Sir William Lockart of Lee was first time Ambasoder at that Court, he was recommended by Sir William Lockart to the Popes Nuncio then at Paris to travel with him to Rome, which gave him an oportunity of being acquainted with many great men.

Returning to Scotland some years therafter, he was well seen in the Civel Law, divinity, History and whatever else could acomplish a Gentleman and good Christian. About the year 1661 he married² Mrs. Rachell Johnston, Daughter to the Lord Warriston. When the Lord Warriston was committed to the Tower in the year 1663 Jerriswood came from Scotland to wait of him, and stayed at London untill The Lord Warriston was sent to Scotland. Then Jerriswood went to Scotland and attended him till his Death. It is observable That from the time of my Lord Warristons Death Jerriswood had an impression on his Spirit that he would suffer death for the Cause of his Religion in the same place that my Lord Warriston did, which he told to some of his nearest friends long before his death.

Also about two years before he died, having been long in the fields alone, he came in and told his Lady that he would Certainly Suffer Death at the Cross of Edinburgh for his principles ere long.

Tho' he was a very Bright man he would never accept of any publick Employment, nor be member of parliament,

² '20 January 1661. Proclaimed in marriage Mr. Robert Baillie of Jerviswood and Rachel Johnston, daughter of Sir Archibald Johnston, Lord Warriston.' —Lanark Parish Registers.

because he would not take the Declaration Test and other Oaths imposed at that time. Yet he lived always peaceably under the government, acknowledged the King's authority, and Declared in his last words that he never intended any thing against the government but to have things redressed in a parliamentary way.

About the year 1677 Mr. James Kirton, late Minister of Edinburgh, who was seized in his own Chamber by Captain Carstairs unwarrantably without any order, Jerriswood, being lodged near by, was Called, and desired the Captain to show his order for apprehending Mr. Kirton; and he having none to produce, Jerriswood Rescued him out of the Captan's hands. Jerriswood was summoned to Appear nixt day before the privy Council, and having appeared was fined in five hundred pound Str. and committed prisoner to the tolbooth of Edinburgh. Afterward was sent prisoner to the Castle of Stirlen where he Continued a long time.

In the year 1678 Jerriswood went to London with Duke William Hamilton and the Noblemen and Gentlemen to represent the grivences of the Highland Host invading the West of Scotland.

About the year 1682, when the Duke of York was appointed Commissioner for the parliament of Scotland, Duke William Hamilton, Lord Tarras and many other members of parliament had concerted to Oppose The Duke's being Commissioner because he was a papist, and had the Oppinion of Sir George Lockart and Sir John Cunningham two Eminent Lawyers who thought it was against law. Jerriswood being consulted all along by Duke Hamilton etc. in that affair, tho he was no member of parliament but as a man very Capable of advising them, The Duke of York, being come to Scotland, by his intrest kept the two lawyers from pleading against him; but Jerriswood was looked upon by the Duke with a Jealous eye and as an enemy to the government because of his opposing popery and arbitrary power

About the year 1683 Sir Hugh and Sir George Campbles of Sesnock, Jerriswood, Commissar Monro and several other Gentlemen were seised in London. Jerriswood, being brought before King Charles the Second and the Councill, was charged with tresonable practices and of being Engaged in a plot against the Government, which he absolutely denied. The King Threatned him with the Boots in Scotland, to which he answeared, His Majesty might give him Spurs too but he Could Say nothing but the truth. He was returned to the gate house and laid in Irions, where he continued Six Months, and afterwards sent down in a Yaught to Scotland with Sir Hugh Campble etc. and there confined Closs prisoner in Edinburgh Tollbooth, where being Called and examined before the Councill and charged with Conversing with and advising the members of Parliament to oppose the Duke of Yorks being Commissioner and several other things Relating thereto of which there was no proof, yet he was fined in Six thousand pound Str. It was then thought their malice would have gone no further against him but he was Still detained Closs prisoner, during which time he was afflicted with a fever of Sex weeks Continuance, and before he was well recovered there came an order from Court to pursue him before the Justiciary for his life. It was very remarkable the thursday night before he Received his indictment he had some glorious Manefestation from God, and on the friday morning he wrot out a note which he convey'd by his keeper to his Sister Mrs. Kirton in which he said 'Sister, Praise, praise God with me for I ' have got such a glorious Manifestation of God this night ' as I would not exchange for Many Many Worlds. They K Chas: th

' are thirsting after my blood, which they will get, but Some 2d died febr.
' of the greatest of them will live Short while after.'" 7th 1685.

It was very extraordinary The Justiciary Court proceeded against him on the same grounds and Reasons for which he was fined by the Councill without ever the Councils Sentence being recalled.

On Munday the 22 of December 1684 he received his indictment to Appear befor the Justice Court at ten a Clock the day following, wher Sir George Lockart was made assessor to Sir George McKenzie, then King's Advocat, to plead against him. He was Carried out in his nightgown not being fully recovered of his fever, and was kept in the Court untill one on the Wedindsay morning, returned again to prison, appeared before them again about eleven the same day, and Received Sentence of death to be execute the very Same day betwext two and three in the afternoon. When he returned to prison after Receiving his Sentence, he prayed publickly before all in the room. Some of his words were ‘ Lord, we take this Severe Sentence from the land of man as a love token from the heart of my God This night Shall I be a piller in the House of God to go furth no more and I shall be with the Generall Assembly of the first born and with the Spirits of Just men made perfect and the Mediator of the new Covenant which is best of all.’

A little before his excecution there came two of the town Curats Mr. Trotter and Mr. Londie to desire access to him, but his Lady and her sisters told them none of them Should come there to trouble him. He pleasantly said he would be content to Speak with the brethren, but he Saw the Sisterhood were not for it and he had little time to Spare. Some of his fellow prisoners came to take their leave of him, asked him what Lord Tarras and others had witnessed against him. He answered, ‘ Who Could Remember fire Side discourse Several years ago.’ For he could not Remember whether one word of it was true or not. But, tho none of the witnesses agreed in any one point in the proof against him, yet they Thirsted So much after his blood that it was resolved this great and good man Should be made a Sacrifice to Popery and arbitrary power. He said also to some of his fellow prisoners they are to cutt me in pices and Send me thorrow the Country but do what they will this body Shall be a glorified body in the day of the Resurrection.

MEMORADUMS AND DERECTIONS to Servants and ruels layd down by my Mother both fer their diet and work. Copyd and colected together 1752, made by her Decr. 1743, and the derections given to the severl Servants.

TO THE BUTLER

1. You must rise airly in the morning which will make your whole business and houshold accounts easie.
2. Two bells are to be rung fer every meal ; for breakfast half an hour after 8 and at 9 ; for diner half an hour At the stated hours.
after 1 and at 2 ; for super half an hour after 8 and at 9.
At the first bell for super lay the bible and cushions for prayers.
3. Have bread toasted, butterd tost or whatever is orderd for breakfast all set ready by the second bell.
4. Consider your business and have a little forethought that you may never be in a hurry or have anything to seek, to which nothing will contribut more than having a fixt and regular places for seting every thing in your custody in order, and never fail seting every thing in its own place, which will prevent much trouble and con-fution, and soon make every thing easie, when you know where to go derectly for what you want.
5. See that the back doors of the Porch be shut as soon as the last bell rings for diner and super. N.B.
6. That all the servants that are to wate at table be ready in the room before we come.
7. That you may never have occation to run out of the room for what is wanted have always at the sideboard what follows or any thing ells you can foresee there can be occation for

Bread	Water	peper	vinigar
Ail	wines	mustard	shalot
smal Beer	sugar	oyle	sallad

N.B. 8. Stand at the sideboard and fill what is cald for to the other servants that come for it, and never fill, nor let any other do it in a dirty glass, but as soon as a glass is drunk out of, range it derectly in the brass pail which you must have there with water for that purpos, then wype it.

9. Never let the dirty knives forks and spoons go out of the dinning room, but put them all in the box that stands for that use under the table.

10. When a signe is made to you, go and see if the second course is ready, then come and take away all the first course before you set down any of the second.

11. In like maner when a sign is made take away the second course.

12. Take the napkine of the midle of the table and sweep all the bread and crums clean of all round the table into a plate.

13. Have any desert that there is ready to set down, always have butter and cheese, and set plates and knives round.

14. When all that is taken away, set down water to wash.

15. Then take away the cloath and set down what wine is cald for, with the silver marks upon them, in bottle boards, and a decanter of water, and glasses to every one round.

16. When diner and super is over, cary what leaves of smal beer and bread into the Pantry your self, and the cheese, that nothing may go to waste.

17. As soon as the company leaves the dining room after diner and super come imediatly and lock up what Liquors are left, clean your glasses, and set every thing in its place and in order.

18. Always take care to keep your doors and your cuberts lockt where you have any charge.

N.B. 19. The Plate must always be clean and bright, which a little wiping every day will do, when once it is made perfectly clean, which must not be by whitening but a little soap suds to wash it, or spirit of wine if it has got any spots, and wiping and rubbing with a brush and then a piece Shambo leather.

20. The Pantry, seler and Larder and every thing that is under your care must be kept perfectly clean and sweet, which will require constant attention, but if things are allowed to run into dirt and confusion, double the time and pains will not set it right, and every thing that stands in dirty places will soon grow musty and stinking and unfit to be used.

21. Let not the dirty cheney go into the kitchen till the cook be ready to clean it and empty the meat of them into pewter dishes before it goes to the second table, and see that none of them is brock when you put them by.

22. Who ever breaks cheney, glasses or bottles let me know that day, otherways thay will be layd to your charge.

23. Be exact in giving your pantry cloaths to wash, and in getting them back and keeping them together.

24. Clean everything without delay and put all your things in order after every meal and after tea.

25. Have tea, water and what may be usually cald for in the afternoon ready, that it may not be to wait for.

26. Every morning clean all the bottle that have been emptyd the day before, and set them up in the bottle rack, this will save much trouble and make cleaner bottles, then when the dirt is allowed to dry in them, if any has a bad smel or sedement sticking to them, to make them as sweet and clean as new, boyle some wood ashes in watter and make a strong Lee, put the bottles into it before it is cold, let them soak in it all night, next day wash them well in it, then in clean water, a few hours standing in the Lee may do for those not very dirty, and hang them in the bottle rack with their heads down, the most necessary thing for having good wine and ale is clean bottles and good corking, every bottle must be ranced with a little of the Liquor that is bottling, and one bottle of it will do the whole.

27. Be constantly attentive in looking about to see what any one wants at table and when you take away a dirty plate take also the dirty knife and fork and give all clean.

28. You must keep your self very clean.

29. At one a clock in the sumer when the servants are at out work all the stable people, carters and maids go to diner, in the winter they dyn at the hour with the rest of the family altogether after we have dynd, but in the sumer you and those that wait at table must dyn after us, both second table and later meat are alowed a clean table cloth every other day, and you must see that all get their vituals warm and in order without confution or waste.

N.B. 30. You must see that all the servants about the stables and out works be out of the kitchen before ten a clock, except when any of them is obliged to wait at super

N.B. 31. The under butler puts on the gentlemens fiers, cleans their boots and shoes, helps you to clean every thing, and to get breakfast and to cover the table, etc.

32. If any of the family is indesposed and eat in their room, require back from the person you gave it to any thing that is under your charge, such as knives, forks, spoons, glasses, linnen, etc., and never allow any thing of that sort to go about the house or to be out of its proper place.

33. Deliver carefully back to the house keeper what ever table linnen you get from her and upon no account make any other use of them, nor dity them by wying any thing as you have cloaths for every use you can want.

34. N.B. Bring up your Account books every monday morning and lay them at my room door.

35. Every servant gets a mutchkin of beer every meal, except when they get milk, which is always when there is any to give them, and then they have only beer for their diner.

36. The servants gets half an Oat loaf at every meal, or if it is broun bread or Ry, the loaf is set down to eat what they want, but no pocketing or waste alowed, and that you must see to, and observe these ruels for bread and beer, for your account of it must hold out with this.

37. N.B. If a glass of wine is cald for to company bring as many glasses on a salver as there is people, and fill it befor you come into the room, and leave the bottle at the door in case more is wanted, and have a clean napkin hung over your arm.

THE SERVANTS DIET

There is to be brewed out of every Louthian Boll of Malt 20 gallons of small beer, our coper and looms brews $2\frac{1}{2}$ bolls at a time which is 50 gallons, that is 400 Scots pints. From 6 furlets of Malt that is a Louthian boll and half there is 240 scots pints of beer.

	pints
17 servants 3 mutchkins a day each is about 13
pints a day which in 14 days is . . .	182
For the table 2 pints a day in 14 days is . . .	28
For second table 2 pints a day is and 2 more . . .	30

This calculation is when all the servants get beer.

8 stone of meal or broun flower should fully serve 17 servants eight days.

There is 30 loves out of the stone of Oat meal, the same reckoning to be made of broun flower or Ry, backt in half peck,¹ loaves. Beef salted for the servants is cut in pieces of as many pounds as there are common servants, if 15, every pice is 15 pounds, no alowence in that for the second table, they geting what comes from the first table.

Sunday they have boild beef and broth made in the great pot, and always the broth made to serve two days.

Monday broth made on Sunday and a Herring.

Teusday broth and Beef.

Wednesday broth and 2 egs each.

Thursday Broth and beef.

Fryday Broth and Herring.

¹ This should surely be half pound ; a peck is a measure of capacity containing about two stones.

Saterday broth without meat, and cheese, or a puden or blood pudens, or a hagish, or what is most convenient.

In the big pot for the 2 days broth is alowed 2 pound of barly or grots, or half and half.

Breakfast and super half an oat loaf or a proportion of broun bread, but better set down the loaf, and see non is taken or wasted, and a muchkin of beer or milk when ever there is any. at diner a mutchkin of beer for each.¹

DERECTIONS FOR THE HOUSE KEEPER

The servants diet belongs to her charge but I chose to put it altogether.

To get up airly is most necessary to see that all the maids and other servants be about their proper business. a constant care and attention is required to every thing that there be no waste nor any thing neglected that should be don.

The dayry carefully lookt after, you to keep the kie of the inner milk house where the butter and milk is, see the butter weighted when churn'd, and salt what is not wanted fresh, to help to make the cheese and every now and then as often as you have time to be at the milking of the cows.

Keep the maids closs at their spining till 9 at night when they are not washing or at other necessary work, weight out to them exactly the soap, and often go to the wash house to see it is not wasted but made the proper use of, and that there be no linnen washt there but those of the family that are alowed to do it. often see that they waste not fire either in the wash house or Landry and that the Landry be kept clean.

Take care that the Cooks waste not butter, spices, nor any thing amongst their hands, nor embasel it, and that the kitchin fire be carefully lookt after and no waste, let it be getherd after diner and the cinders throwen up that non be throwen out, neither from that nor by the Chamber maid.

Make the kitchin maid keep all the places you have lookt up very clean, also the kitchin, Hal and passages, and see the Cook feed the fowls that are put up right and keep them clean or they can never be fat nor good.

To take care the house be kept clean and in order, help to sheet and make the straingers beds, that the beds and sheets be dry and well aird. get account from the chamber maid of what candles she gets from you for the rooms and see there be no waste of candle nor fire any where.

Keep the kie of the cole house but when it is wanted to get out coals, but be sur it be always lockt at night, that the Turf stack be not tred down but burnt even forward. let them fill all their places with coals at once, that the kie be not left in the door.

To make scimed milk cheese for the use of the family when ever there is milk enough for it. when there are more cows then the dairy maid can milk so soon as they shoud be, let Grisell Wait or any other in the toun I shall name help her and get for doing it a pint of scim'd milk a day.

As every thing is weighted to you give out nothing but by weight.

6 ounces pruens for Cockaleekie or stove.

6 oun. Makerony for a smal dish, 8 oun. larger.

6 oun. vermiceli for a soup.

a pound peas for a puden or soup.

for best short bread 8 lb. flower 3 lb. butter, second short bread 8 lb. flower 2 lb. butter.

For a bun of 5 lb flower 1 lb butter, 2 lb raisins, 1 lb curants, 4 ounces caraway seed, 4 ounces sugar and barm.

The servants sheets is changed once a muntth.

One week the body linnin is washt, the second week table and bed linnin and always bouckt when the weather will allow of it, the third week the landry maids must be kept close at spinning and at all times when they have not other necessary business, such as Hay and Harvest and the Barn which the dairy maid goes to when she has a moments time for it, and always to the mill with any melder. the dairy maid, house maid and kitchen maid always to spin when they are not otherways necessarily employed which they will often pretend to be if they are not diligently looked after and keep to it.

Thomas Yool, George Carter and postilion do not wash in the house nor John Hume the Carter.

The other men servants wash in the house or out of the house as I can agree for them, but not at a certainty. when washed out I give 10sh. a year for each of them.

All the skim'd milk that can be spared after serving the family or when cheese is not made of it, to be measured and sent to Grisell Wait who sells it and accounts for it, or gives it away to such poor people in the town as I give her a note of. but none of them to come about the doors for it.

Take care there be no hangers on, nor sauntering odd people come about the house, but those that have business and that not at male time, which they will always do if not hindered.

See that all the maids keep their dusters and washing cloths dry and in order, and not let them lie about in holes wet, which soon rots and makes an end of them.

See that every one keeps what is in their charge in their proper stated places, then nothing will be out of order, or to seek when wanted, nor any hurry.

In general to keep all the servants in order, with some authority and make them obey you and do their duty without feed or favour to any, and to look after every thing with the same care and faithfulness as if it was your own, then few things can go wrong. if diffident or ignorant of any thing, ask directions from me or Mrs. Menzies or any that can inform you.

¹ James Graham, fourth Marquis and first Duke of Montrose, at this time Keeper of the Great Seal of Scotland, married Lady Christian Carnegy, second daughter of David, Earl of Northesk. The Duke and Duchess seem to have been very intimate friends of the Baillies, as their names occur frequently in the Accounts. Lockhart was not unnaturally very sore at the Duke becoming a Whig, and sums up his character as follows: 'He was a man of good understanding yet was led by the nose by a set of men whom he far surpassed, and never in all his by-past life did one material action that was prudent and discreet. His courage upon certain accounts was much questioned, but his unsincerity and falseness allowed by all.'

² John, fifth Earl and first Duke of Roxburgh, at this time Secretary of State for Scotland. He married Lady Mary Finch, only child of Daniel, Ear^l of Winchelsea and Nottingham, and widow of William Savile, Marquis of Halifax. His Grace had been very closely associated with Baillie at the time of the passing of the Act of Union, being one of the inner circle who directed the voting of the 'Squadron Volante.' Lockhart describes him as follows: 'He was a man of good sense improv'd by so much reading and learning that perhaps he was the best accomplished young man of quality in Europe, and had so charming a way of expressing his thoughts that he pleased even those 'gainst whom he spoke.' The Duchess of Roxburgh was said to be the original of the Roxana of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu's Town eclogue.

ing to the earldom of Rothes he assumed the surname of Leslie, and resigned the earldom of Haddington to his younger brother. He married Lady Jean Hay, daughter of John, second Marquis of Tweeddale. He was another of the Whigs for whom Lockhart had not a good word to say, 'being false to a degree, a contemner of honour and engagements, extremely ambitious, ridiculous, vain, and conceited (tho' of very ordinary parts and accomplishments), extravagantly proud and scandalously mercenary.'

'He was a man framed and cut out for business, extremely capable and assiduous; of a proud, aspiring temper, and when his affairs and politics went right, haughty to a great degree; and vice versa the civillest, complaisantest man alive, and a great affecter of popularity.'—Lockhart's Papers. 'Make 2 quarts of new milk scalding hot, and pour upon it quickly 4 quarts of fresh butter milk; let it stand without stirring till it becomes cold and firm, then take off the hat or upper part, drain it in a hair sieve, put it into a shape for half-an-hour, turn it into a dish, and serve with cream and sugar.'—Stevens's Farm Book, 1855, vol. ii. p. 299.

² The famous Lady Mary Pierrepont, eldest daughter of Evelyn, first Duke of Kingston, and the Lady Mary Fielding, daughter of William, Earl of Denbigh. She married Edward Wortley Montagu, eldest son of the Honourable Sydney Montagu. She was at this time a great friend of Lady Murray, née Grisell Baillie, a friendship which came to an end a few years afterwards. In 1721 'the peace of Mrs. Murray's family had been painfully broken in consequence of the brutality of a servant of her brother-in-law, Lord Binning, who, in a fit of drunkenness, burst into her bedchamber in the middle of the night and threatened to put her instantly to death if she ventured to resist his violence. With great courage and presence of mind she succeeded in alarming and calling up the family; but for this crime, which was held to be a capital burglary, the man was condemned to death, though afterwards his punishment

On the subject of this escape, Lady Mary thought fit to exercise her wicked wit in an infamous ballad, which of course she loudly disclaimed all knowledge of, but of which her own letters to her sister Lady Mary plainly enough betray her to have been the writer. . . . The subject is repeatedly alluded to in the printed collection of her letters, and still more pointedly in some of those that have not been published.'—Appendix to Lady Murray's Memoirs.

² George Dubb Doddington, afterwards Lord Melcomb Regis, at this time a Lord of the Treasury. He left a diary which has been published, and which shows the writer in anything but a pleasant light. Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, who never missed an opportunity of saying something spiteful of her quondam friend, Lady Murray, writes in 1725: 'Mrs. Murray has got a new lover in the most accomplished Mr. Doddington.'

[Bills of Fare]

26 Janu^r 1728. Mr. Onsly,¹ the Speaker, Hadinton,² and Marchmont,³ Coll. Hope, Mr. Johnston, and Mr. Mitchell. 11 at Table.

2nd. 5 dish : 2 Duclins, date py, Kidny beans and sheaps touns roasted ; sids, a crab and Asparagras.

² Thomas Hamilton, sixth Earl of Haddington, whose son, Lord Binning, was married to Lady Grisell Baillie's daughter Rachel.

³ Alexander Hume, second Earl of Marchmont, K.T., Lady Grisell Baillie's brother. He was the third son of the first Earl, his elder brothers predeceasing their father. He married Margaret, daughter and heiress of Sir George Campbell of Cessnock, when he assumed the surname of Campbell.

⁴ See note 1, p. 294.

⁵ Lady Elizabeth Letchmere, daughter of the third Earl of Carlisle, married, first, Nicholas Letchmere, Attorney-General in 1718 and raised to the peerage in 1721 as Lord Letchmere. 'The discreet and sober Lady L——re has lost such furious sums at the Bath that it may be questioned whether all the sweetness the waters can put into my lord's blood can make him endure it, particularly £700 at one sitting which is aggravated with many astonishing circumstances.' —Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. She married, second, Thomas Robinson of Rokeby Park.

⁷ See note 2, p. 292.

² 'Sweet Molly Lapell,' familiarly known as 'Tom' in the Prince of Wales's circle, daughter of Brigadier-General Nicholas Lepell, at one time Maid of Honour to the Princess of Wales, afterwards Mistress of the Robes to her when Queen. She married John Hervey, the handsome son of the Earl of Bristol, who rather neglected her. She was a great friend of Lady Murray, and stood loyally by her in her quarrel with Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. Indeed, she was beloved by the whole Baillie family. It was she who attended Lady Grisell on her deathbed, both Lady Murray and Lady Binning being ill at the time. She was noted for her beauty, and seems to have been a charming personality. Her portrait still adorns the walls of Mellerstain. Her husband was a great friend of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, with whom his wife was not on speaking terms on account of the quarrel between Lady Mary and Lady Murray.

Giovanni Carestini, born about 1705. 'His voice, at first a powerful clear soprano, afterwards changed to the fullest, finest, deepest contralto ever perhaps heard.'—Groves's Dictionary of Music, etc. Carestini made his debut in London under Handel on 4th December 1733. He was a tall, handsome man, and a very good actor.

Directions for Holland

In general avoid lodging at any English or Dutch house, they being the most imposing, the French the best. A rule never to be departed from throw all Holland is constantly to make an agreement first for every thing you get, or in imploying anybody if but for a message, or you will be greatly imposed upon and pay duple. If you use them with sevilety and show them you will not be bubbled they will use you well, but in no way will bear rough treatment, and are ever ready to impose upon any they see ignerant and careless.

At Rotterdam

Avoid the English house the most impertinently imposing of any we met with. If Mr. Baillie the banker be alive send for him, or for Mr. Knaghten a banker, both Scots men, either of them will be usefull to you, when they know who you are.

At the Hague

Send for Monsieur Piere Daniel Tonyn sur le Corte Vyverberg he is brother to Capn. Tonyn, he will assist you in anything. Lodge at Mr. Adams at the Golden Star and Lyon in the Korte Houtstraet near the plain. There is an ordinary which it is very right to dyn at when you do not stay long in a place, to see the manners and ways of different people, but a disagreeable thing to be constantly in a croud of straingers. Here you must go and wait upon the King of Britains Minister if there is one, and so you must do where ever you go where the King has a Minister. If he returns not your visit go no more.

At Amsterdam

Send for Mr. James Wedderburn, Merchant, a relation of yours, he will assist you in any thing, he lives over de Illustre School op de flucale Burghwall. Lodge at the Bible and Orange in the Warmer Straet or Ville de Lions. Hear the fine organ in the great church.

At Leyden lodge at the Castle of Antwerp on the Kopenburgh. The Phisic Gardens and other gardens there are worth seeing.

At Delft see the Prince of Oranges Tomb.

At Harlem see the Bleech field, a fine sight when covered with cloth.

At Utrecht lodge at the Casteel van Antwerp op de ganse Markt. If the Prince and Princess of Orange be at Insedyck, a house of theirs near Utrecht, or at their house in the wood near the Hague, or any where near, you must go wait upon them, and get some body to go with you to introduce you.

A Rout for seeing North Holland

Hire voitures at Amsterdam by the day, make it in your bargaen that the coachman shall maintain himself and horses, otherways you will be much imposed upon in that article, if you can likeways agree with him that he shall pay all the passage and toll money, it will be better, but that they will not like to do.

Let the voiture cross the river in the morning befor you are ready, otherwise you will be detain'd, you take coach just at the place where you land on the other side of the river, the first toun you come to is Munickendam, from that you come through another toun cald Edam, but in neither of those places is there any worth seeing, then go to Hoorn where you may dine at the Dool.¹ Befor you come to Munickendam you pass a village cald Brook, which is remarkable for being built without any order or regular streets, the houses all detach't from one another; it is very neat and the inhabitants reckond vastly rich. after seeing Hoorn you go that night to Enchussen, the best house is the Toorn upon the shore, see the Stadhouse there. If you stay out but two days go from Enckuyhen to Alckmaer which is the prittiest toun you will see, go airly and you can be back at Amsterdam at night, remember to hear the organ in the great church of Alckmaer, the finest in the world. Lodge at the Dool.¹ Between Alckmaer and Amsterdam you come through a very fine country which formerly was three great lakes and stile retain the names of the Bumerent, the Beemster, and the Scermer, if you stay out three days go from Enchuysen to Medenblyck, the best house the Valck, you may be early in the afternoon at Alckmaer and next day return to Amsterdam by Harlem.

Some Account of the Difference of Money

Guineas are a ready coin all over Holland and Flanders if you can carry them without discovery, and is better then a bill when the Exchange is 36 Eskillings for a guinea, the Eskillings in Holland are not so good as in Flanders, those with a star are the best, those cald Mal Eskillings pass for a peny or half peny less, they will take non of the Dutch Eskillings for what they pass in Holland in Flanders, so get rid of them. The Guilders which are 1 shillin and 8 pence of our money are a good coin and taken in Flanders for the full value. At Leige and Spa and all the Bishop of Leige's Country an Eskilling gose for 10 pence, so that every Guinea passes for £1, 10 10, reckoning 37 Eskillings to the guinea.²

No money gose in France but the new French Louis, but they are seazable at entring into the country if they find above 5 Louis for each person, but as you loose much by bills of exchange you must hide what you have and show only a little. In a Louis there is 24 livers, in a liver 20 sols, there is 3 liver pieces which is cald Ecus blanc and 6 liver pieces which is cald Ecus grand.

Spanish or French Pistols³ go best in Italy any other

² This statement of Lady Grisell hardly coincides with her accounts, where the schelling is valued at a little over 6d., which would appear to be more correct.

³ About 17s. 7½d.

money loosing much, so change your French money for Spanish or French Pistols befor you go into Italy, they go all over it, and so dos Florentine, Genoese and Venetian Sequins,¹ which last are the best money, if you can get them at the same price they are allways best but do not take them in Lombardy. A Sequine is about the value of half a guinea, what is cald a Roman croun, tho I never saw the coin, is 10 Pauls, there is 20 Pauls in a Sequin, in a Venetian Sequin I think there is 21 or 22 Pauls, a Testoon is 3 Pauls.

The silver money in the Kingdome of Naples is different from that all over Italy. In a Sequin there is Naples ducats, in a ducat 10 Carlins, and a coin cald a terri which is two Carlins.

In Germany Hungars is the money most curent, a Hungar is a gold coin in which is 4 Florins and some times 10 or 12 Karrentari, 60 Karrentari make a Florin, 12 Karrentari make a Roman Paul, Spanish Pistols are also good money here and are worth $7\frac{1}{2}$ Florins. In going out of the different dominions in Germany which come very quck, some times twice in a day, you must take care to get rid of your silver money, for what passes in one territory will not pass for the same in another, and they are so intricat and different little coins I can give no account of them.

In every toun where you stay a day or more you may hier a servant that knows the place and can conduct you every where, there is always plenty to be had, but you must get your Land Lord to recomend and ansvere for their honesty, since there are many rogues amongst them, their constant pay is a Testoon² a day, or the value of it alike all over Italy.

For seeing churches and palaces and most other places give a Testoon, if you see any Sovereign's house you must give two Testoons, if you have audience of any Sovereign, the guards and servants expect some thing to drink, half a Pistol amongst them all is sufficient. At Rome a Croun is enough to the Pope's. At the great seasons of the year if you are there they come again, as likewise the servants of all the Italian houses you go to, who also constantly come the day after you have been at their house the first time for some thing, two Testoons is enough to give them and the first time only, and again at Christianmass and Easter. If you walk often at Villas you need not give every time. A Testoon now and then is sufficient.

At Rome you must have an antiquary to conduct and show you the antiquatys and raretys who will always atend you when you send to him when you go to see any thing. 5 Pistols is enough to give him for all when you go away.

Through your whole journey you will be often stopt at coming into every different dominion to serch your trunks for merchandise as they call it. Telling them they may look if they please, at the same time assuring them you have non, and giving them a little money, will free you from any trouble, sometimes a Paul in France, one, two or three livers accoridng as you have things about you to be affrayd of a strict serch.

At every place you stay at, any acquaintens you meet, or in some things your Land Lord will inform you of the general price of things, such as the hier of your coach, how much a head for eating. All over France the general price is 25 ¹ sols a head for diner, and 30 ² sols for super and bed. But then you must make your agreement or they will make you pay a great dale more and you will not be better served. In Italy you only say when you come into your Inn you eat a Pasto and there is a fixt price all over Italy for diner and super. I think it is 2½ ³ Pauls at diner and 3 ⁴ pauls at super.

Turin

The first toun you come to worth notice here you may see all in two or three days. Some houses of the King's a little way out of town worth seeing, a noble prospect from them. If there is a British Minister there go to him.

Milan

Here you may stop three or four days. There is many things worth seeing, the great Church St. Paolo and others, the Hospital, the Pest house, the house where the Ecco repeats above fifty times¹ etc., the Boromean Islands near Milan, which are fine, if you go will take up 3 days to go and return. In the way to Milan see the Chartereax at Pavia.

At Piacenza stop a day to see the Dukes Palace and the Theater.

At Parma—a day to see the galery of pictures and the famous Theater.

At Regio there is nothing, but within two mills out of the road there is a new house of the Prince of Modena's in the French tast worth seeing, to see how inferior it is to the Italian Palaces, etc.

At Modena—a day or two to see the Duke's Palace, etc.

Bologna

This will take up a week. Inquire for Mr. Magnoni a banker in our name. He will be of great use to you when he knows who you are, and is an honest man, ask also for Sigre. Barnachi² the famous singer and Sigre. Sandoni³ the husband of the Cuzone, they will be pleasd to be of service to any of our family. See the Institute—the Churches—Palazo Sanpieri, Palazo Tavi—Pal. There is here the famous Signora Laura Bassa, a learned lady who is made a doctor; she is very affable good company and makes straingers wellcome that come to see her; Mr. Magnoni will introduce you to her.

At Loretta half a day is enough where there is only the Santa Cassa and the riches in it to be seen.

Betwixt Loretta and Rome you must see the famous cascade at Terni, which is but 2 or 3 leagues going and coming out of your road.

At Rome

Here so many things are to be seen that it will take you up some months and you must have an antiquary to conduct and show you every thing. The only one I know is Sigre. Marco Parker al Caffè Inglese in Piazza di Spagna. He is an English man and cousen to Mr. Parker the Beedle at Oxford.

At Naples

Here you need no derections, only inquire for the Marquis Rinuccini, Mr. Consul Allen and Mr. Hammond, who are so good friends of ours they will conduct and derect you in every thing. I only desire you woud wait upon Made-moiselle Louise Cagnony and her sister where ever they are and they will make you acquainted with any other of our friends. See Portici, where we lived, and Soriento, where we past some time very agreeably.

At going into any great town you pay only common post, at setting out from a great town you pay Post Royal, which is a post and a half for only one post of way. Coming into Rome they drive you directly to the Customhouse to have your baggage searched. Give a Festoon, and if they do not suspect you have counterband goods, they will be very civil and just open your trunks and look into them, but if you have any thing seizable you loose it if they find it. Put your Bibles or prayer book in your pocket or hide them in the seat of the chaise which is seldom searched, or they will certainly take them from you, or any English books they think heretical.

A French house in the Via Magia is the best to lodge at, where we were well used, Collins's, an English house there, is generally full and not the most reasonable. All English houses or any English body you employ abroad for any thing are generally the first and readiest to impose upon you, therefor to be avoided, or at least be much upon your guard.

If Mr. Mann is stile Resident here he will conduct and take care of you in every thing. In case he is not I set down what follows. See the galary, which imployes you several days, ask for the Copys in Brass of the 4 famouse status that are in the Tribuna, where there is innumerable fine and curious things, as there is in every part and room in that galery. The great Church, which is larger every way then St. Pauls in London; behind the great alter in the dome is an unfinisht statue of a dead Saviour by Michal Angelo. See Giotto's Tower from whence there is a fine prospect of the Citty and Country. Observe the gates of the Baptistry, particularly that facing the church. It is the finest piece of work of that kind perhaps in the world. The little chappel under St. Lorenzo where the bodys of the great Dukes are repositied is the design of Michal Angelo and several of the statues in it are by his own hand. The Library of St. Lorenzo, the entrence into it with the stairs are from the design of M. Angelo. The Cloysters of the Annunciata are painted by Andrea del Sarto and his scholars. The best are a Saint bringing to life a dround boy, which is the first on your right hand as you enter, and a Maddonna with Joseph leaning on a sack oposit to the entry.

In the Church of the Carmes is a handsome Chappel belonging to the Corsini Family.

The Poggio Imperiale about a mile from town is a country seat of the Great Dukes, the apartments adorn'd with valuable paintings and other fine furnitur.

Pratolino six miles from Florence another seat of the Dukes. The great colossall statue in the garden, the water works, the grotto, the Theatre in the house, all worth seeing: when you are here ride the ring.

Boboli the Dukes garden is very fine, desire to see the Menagery there, where George will be delighted with great variety of all kinds of strange burds and beasts, if you have any brass money in your pockets it will be very good food for the Ostrich, in the uper part of the garden where the Citronades grow there is a good statue of Adam and Eve by Michel Angelo. You will have good luck if you escape being wet when the water works plays, they are very pritty.

The Capins a little way out of town, beautiful road to it, cows are kept there, fine chise, butter and cream, people go there to breakfast, and there is several rooms and arbers for company to sit in.

The Palaces best worth seeing are Pitti, Ricardi, Strozzi, Iarini where there is a fine colection of paintings.

There is statues and paintings to be seen in the old palace belonging to the Duke, you must send over night to have leave to see the Wardrobe. The Dukes coaches are worth seeing.

The apartment of the Electrise is well worth seeing.

There are good statues in the streets as a Herculus and Centaur by John de Bologne, a Rape of the Sabins by the same, a man suporting his dead friend antique. Take notice of the beautys of the Ponte Santa Trinita.

At Francolino we took water to Venice. We hied two piotte (having 3 chaises in company), for which we payd at the rate of a hunger to each man that rowed. You may go by land but it is excessive bad road and dear. You will be two days going and must take provisions in the boat with you. We coud neither get beds nor any thing to eat the night stopt by the way.

At Venice

Lodge at Monsieur D'Henrys on the great Canall where we were well used and cheap. See the Church and Procuratories of St. Mark. The smal church dedicated to St. Geminiano, which stands at one end of the Place of St. Marks, was built by Sansovino. If Mr. Consul Broun be alive who is a worthy honest Scots man send to him and he will do every thing for you when he knows who you are. Your hied servant will cary you to all the churches worth seeing. In the Church and Convent of St. Giorgio Maggiore are fine paintings by Titian, Tintoret and other masters of the Venetian school, in the refectory is the famous Marriage of Cana by Paul Veronese. There is good paintings in the schools of St. Rocco and St. Marco. The Palaces best worth seeing are Grinani—Maniani—Grassi—Delphino—Pisani—Barberigo. The Doge's Palace and the Courts of Justice are adorn'd with fine paintings of Titian, Tintoret, Paul Veronese, Bassan, etc. Observe in going into the Palace the statues of Adam and Eve much esteemd. The Arsenal is well worth seeing and the Treasury and Towr of St. Mark. The Library of St. Mark contains several fine busts, statues and other remains of antiquaty, the roof is finely painted. The Realto, a bridge over the great Canal, is very fine and many fine buildings by Paladio. Eat Serbetti at a house near St. Marks famous for making every thing in Ice the best of any place, it is like a Coffie house.

Venice to Padua

We went by water down the Brent, hied a Bercello which is a large boat, for which we payd 48 pauls ; it conveniently holds a great many with chaises and baggage, and is a most agreeable way of going, great numbers of fine houses being all along that river.

¹ The well-known John Law, born in Edinburgh 1681, died in Venice in poverty in 1729.

At Padua

Lodge at the post house, see the Church of St. Guistina, it is one of the finest in the world, was built after a plan of Palladio's, the Convent behind the Church is very pritty, the Libary and Cellers are commonly seen by straingers. The Church of St. Antonio di Padua. The Chappel del Santo. The Bas relief that adorns it is the history of his life and miracl's, very fine; the Scuola di St. Antonio is well painted by Titian. See the toun house in which is the Monument of Titus Livius the Roman Historian; see the Garden of Simples and Papafava. From Padua quite through the Venetian State there can be no regulation for the price of post horses, they will have what they please, there being no limited order. We some times payd $18\frac{1}{2}$, $16\frac{1}{2}$ and 15 pauls per chaise, and in proportion for a single horse. It being thought dear makes most people go by Voiturino's, but it is a mistake. We went by water down the Rhine in two days and a half. We hired two boats, one for ourselves close covered like a Pleasur Barge upon the Tames, in which we lay all night upon good straw and Pillows for our heads, and never went on shore. An open boat for the servants and chaises. We paid 75 Florins for all, Taxes included, of which there are many at every town you pass by. It was in the summer and no danger of catching cold. We carried our provisions, had tea water boiled and every thing dressed in the Boat with the servants which was tied to ours. The water men or servants went on shore at any town we came to and got us what ever we wanted.

At Collogne lodge at the St. Esprit, see the town and churches here or at Frankfort, get rid of your caravan trains, which you may now go without, and will be of no use to you in Flanders, sell them for what you can get though less than you paid. We left 3 at Spa thinking they offered us too little for them at Frankfort; they are yet unsold. At the entrance into Germany they are wanted and necessary for people going in, and by chance you may sell them for what you gave, but take any thing rather than leave them to be sold at a better price which they will persuade you to do and you never hear more of them.

Paris

Here we had privet lodgeings at the Hotel d'Ambour, Rue de Tour, Fauxbourg St. Germain, payd 300 livers a munth for all the first floor, containing 6 handsome well furnished rooms, 3 rooms on the floor over it, a Hall for servants and other conveniences.

A Tour we made to see some of the Kings houses about Paris, October 1733

We set out with our own coaches, with only a pair of horses. First to La Mutte, a hunting Seat of the Kings, the house not fine, the gardens pritty. From that through the Bois de Bologne to St. Cloud, a Seat of the Duke of Orleans's, the Park and Gardens 6 Leagues round. From that about a League to Mudon, a house of the Kings finly situated. Thence to Versaills about 4 a clock and saw part of the house that evening. Lodged at the Cadran Blue. Next morning saw the rest of the house and gardens, which woud take up more then a day. Saw the Menagery where there is a smal house. Went through the Park of Versaillies to Trianon, a very pritty house of the Kings built of marble and fine gardens. From that to Marli, an exceeding fine place. The house has 4 apartments, no body gose there when the King gose but whome he names. There is on each side of the house 6 pavillions in the garden sourounded by trees, 2 familys can lodge in each. Tho this place lys high yet it apears very low, being surrounded by high mountains, except towards the garden. There is no water but what is supplyd by a vast machine half a league below the house, which may be said to throw the river Sein up a vast hill, which is there received in reservoirs to throw it back again into the Garden, where water abounds in all shapes. From Marli see the Machine, which is composed of 14 vast wheels. From that to St. Germans, a very fine place where King James and his Queen died. It is quite ruinous, but capable of being made the finest place the King has. The Castle is now inhabited by Irish people of fashion adherents to that King. The Tarrass is very fine. Here we lay the second night at the Prince de Galles, and got to Paris next day by diner.

To be seen more in and about Paris

Here if you do not think it worth while to bring your Chaises home and they are but unwildy and troublesome in our country, sell them for what you can get. Some times it happens people just come there wanting to go to Paris or Italy will give you there value and be glad to get them. If that dos not happen, the people there who make it their business to buy chaises to sell again, will give you very little for them, but take it reither then leave them there to be sold. It will perhaps cost duple there price for the hier of there standing and not to be sold at last, as we found by two we left there.¹

From Callais to Dover we hierd a little shipe, on of Mr. Minets, 3 guineas is the common hier for the whol shipe, if others are going you may get passage cheaper, either in those boats or in the Kings packet boats that go constantly. Ly at Dover at the Shipe. Your trunks and baggadage.

¹ 'They ask me here [Calais, 27 July 1739] extravagant prices for chaises, of which there are great choice, both French and Italian: I have at last bought one for fourteen guineas of a man whom Mr. Hall recommended me.'—Lady Mary Wortley Montagu's Letters.

NOTE.—There is nothing in the accounts to show what weight is represented by the words ‘dale,’ ‘cart,’ and ‘load.’ A dale, however, seems to be used as synonymous with a ton, and as we see from the Accounts (1703) that it took two carts to carry a dale, a cart probably represents a $\frac{1}{2}$ ton. A load nowadays means 3 cwt., and it probably meant the same then.

In London the Accounts show that a cart carried nearly a ton ($\frac{5}{8}$).

TABLES OF SCOTS AND ENGLISH MONEY AND MEASURES¹

I.—MONEY

12 Scots pennies	= 1 Scots shilling	= 1 penny stg.
20 Scots shillings	= 1 Scots pound	= 1s. 3d. stg.
A guinea	= between £1, 1s. and £1, 3s. 6d.
A jacobus	= about £1, 6s.
A mark	= 13s. 4d. Scots	= 1s. 1 $\frac{1}{3}$ d. stg.
A rex dollar	= 7s. 3d.
A dollar	= 4s. 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

8 „ furlongs	= 1 „ mile, or 1760 yards.

III.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT

(1) Scots Troyes or Dutch Weight raised from the Standard Lanark Stone.

16 drops	= 1 ounce	=	475·56 imp. troy grains.
16 ounces	= 1 lb.	=	7608·95 „ „
16 lbs.	= 1 Lanark stone	=	121743·195 „ „

(2) Imperial Troy Weight.

24 grains	= 1 pennyweight	= 24 imp. Troy grains.
20 pennyweights	= 1 ounce	= 480	„	„
12 ounces	= 1 lb.	= 5760	„	„

(3) Scots Tron Weight raised from the Edinburgh Tron Pound.

16 drops	= 1 ounce	= 601·417 imp. Troy grains.
16 ounces	= 1 lb.	= 9622·67	„	„
16 lbs.	= 1 stone	= 153962·72	„	„

(4) Imperial Avoirdupois Weight.

16 drams	= 1 ounce	= 437·5 imp. Troy grains.
16 ounces	= 1 lb.	= 7000	„	„
14 lbs.	= 1 stone	= 98000	„	„
1 dale	= 1 ton.

1 Scots Troy pound = 1 lb. 1 oz. 6·3 dr. imperial avoirdupois.

1 Edinburgh Tron pound = 1 lb. 6 oz. „ „

Assuming that Lady Grisell in her Accounts used the Edinburgh Tron Weight, it is necessary in order to compare the prices then and now to multiply the quantity or divide the price by $\frac{22}{16} = \frac{11}{8}$.

IV.—MEASURES OF CAPACITY

(1) Scots Liquid Measure.

4 gills	= 1 mutchkin	= 26·0508 imp. cubic inches.
2 mutchkins	= 1 chopin	= 52·1017	„	„
2 chopins	= 1 pint	= 104·2034	„	„
8 pints	= 1 gallon	= 833·6272	„	„

(2) Scots Dry Measure for Barley and Oats.

4 lippies	= 1 peck	= 807·576 imp. cubic inches.
4 pecks	= 1 firloft	= 3230·305	„	„
4 firlots	= 1 boll	= 12921·222	„	„
16 bolls	= 1 chaldar	= 206739·546	„	„

A forpet, forper, or fourtpert = according to Jameson $\frac{1}{4}$ of a peck, or $\frac{1}{16}$ of a firloft; according to Lady Grisell it equalled $\frac{1}{10}$ of a firloft.

6 firlots	= A Lothian boll.
1 boll oats	= 10 stones weight.
2 bolls oats	= 1 load	= 20 stone = $2\frac{1}{2}$ cwt.
A chaldar	= 1 ton	= 160 stones.
1 cwt.	= 8 stones.

(3) Imperial Liquid or Dry Measure.

4 gill	= 1 pint	= 34·659 imp. cubic inches.
2 pints	= 1 quart	= 69·318	„	„
4 quarts	= 1 gallon	= 277·274	„	„
2 gallons	= 1 peck	= 554·548	„	„
4 pecks	= 1 bushel	= 2218·191	„	„
8 bushels	= 1 quarter	= 17745·526	„	„

1 Scots pint = 3 imperial pints.

1 Scots peck = $1\frac{3}{8}$ imperial pecks.

2. Education.—The figures entered as paid by the city are taken from the City Accounts; the figures entered as paid from Queen Anne's grant are taken from Sir Alexander Grant's History of the University; the figures entered as derived from fees in the classes of Greek, Logic and Metaphysics, Natural Philosophy, Moral Philosophy and Humanity, are based on the fact that when the Professor of Moral Philosophy in 1708 was forbidden to charge class fees, he received an additional salary of £50 in lieu thereof. It is therefore probable that £50 also represents the value of the fees in these other classes which formed part of the same course of study. The sums entered as class fees for Divinity, Church History, and Mathematics are merely estimates. The fees drawn by the Librarian were for issuing diplomas, and the figure entered is an estimate founded on the number of graduates, and the fees he was allowed to charge. In judging of the salaries of the Principal and of the Professor of Divinity, it has to be remembered that these gentlemen also held as ministers city charges, which brought each of them in an additional sum of £122, 4s. 5d. Graham in his Social Life of Scotland states that the salaries of Professors in Scotland during the first quarter of the eighteenth century averaged from £25 to £30, exclusive of class fees. As will be seen from the above state, the salaries of the regular professors in Edinburgh averaged considerably more.

It is more difficult to ascertain what rise has taken place in the remuneration of the parish 'Dominie.' According to statute he was entitled in 1707 to a salary from the heritors of not less than £5, 18s. 3d., and not more than £11, 2s. 6d. In a Memorial drawn up in 1782 for the Parochial School Masters in Scotland, it is stated that this remuneration, 'though not great, was yet well suited to the times, the funds, and distinction of rank at the period. The emoluments of their office placed them above day labourers, and the poorer class of mechanics and farmers; nay, raised them to an equality with the more opulent farmers, respectable tradesmen and citizens; among whom their employment, their manners, and prospects in life procured them a degree of respect very advantageous to their profession.' Still in spite of this opinion, and of our knowledge that they enjoyed in addition certain perquisites, their pay seems to have been relatively poor. On the other hand an examination of the fees paid by Lady Grisell for the education of her daughters as shown in Appendix III., would indicate that private tuition was relatively well paid, and taken all over, it may be assumed that the increase in their professional incomes lies between six and ten.

3. Tradesmen, etc.—In comparing the wages paid to tradesmen then and now, it is necessary to bear in mind that whereas they worked at least 10 hours a day in 1707, they only work at most 9 hours nowadays. This has been taken into account in the foregoing state. The amounts entered as presently paid are based on the wage per hour paid to the tradesman, not the sum per hour charged by his master against the customer.

It will be observed that in the foregoing state no notice has been taken of the earnings of Solicitors, Doctors, and Surgeons, nor of the pay of the Army. In regard to the first three of these, it has been found impossible to arrive at any true method of comparison, the work performed by them then and now being so different. The few items capable of comparison, such as drawing bonds for money, bleeding, syringing the ears, etc., indicate that a man in the position of George Baillie would have had to pay eight times more now than he did then.

As to the pay of the army, it was relatively so high that it stands alone, and must be judged by itself. The generous treatment meted out to soldiers does not appear to have arisen from any attempt to place the Scottish army on the same footing as the English army, alongside of which it was called upon to fight, for we find the same high rate of pay ruling in Scotland during the reigns of Charles II. and James VII. before the beginning of the great Continental war. It arose more probably from the desire to ensure the loyalty of the army, and it no doubt accounts for the fact that so many gentlemen were to be found serving as non-commissioned officers and privates, and that desertion was at that time practically unknown. The following state, for which the editor is indebted to Mr. Andrew Ross, Ross Herald, shows how small has been the increase in the pay of the army during the last two hundred years, and indicates that in spite of its pay being occasionally a year or two in arrears, the army was either largely overpaid then, or miserably underpaid now. In looking at the figures it must be borne in mind that colonels, lieutenant-colonels, and majors had companies, and drew captain's pay in addition to their pay as field officers.

¹ Old Mrs. Baillie died this year, and the Baillies flitted to a house belonging to Baillie Hamilton.

² Lady Grisell has an entry to the effect that her book 'was not rectified, and it was to great truble to writt them all out.' This probably accounts for the want of detail in that and the two preceding years.

³ This figure includes the family clothes, but no details are given to enable a separation to be made.

⁴ Flits to Lord Colinton's house, probably in Foulis Close.

⁵ Expenses of going to London on 1st April, staying there and returning by 15th May.

⁶ Includes Bonds for borrowed money.

⁷ This and the two entries immediately below include servants' clothing.

⁸ This should be £160, 13s., but Lady Grisell enters it as shown here.

⁹ Lady Grisell and her husband seem to have been in London for several months at the beginning of the year.

¹⁰ Includes a payment of £27, 15s. 6d. to Miss Menzies, 'over and above her fie for her care of the bairns when they had the fever.'

11 This is the year their daughter Grisell was married to Mr. Murray, and the expenses directly attributable to this event amount to nearly £280.

12 In the autumn the family go to London.

13 Furnished lodgings at £14 p. month.

14 This includes £45 paid to a carriage builder 'to account,' and was no doubt part of the price of a new carriage. Two horses and a coachman are hired at £25 a quarter.

15 This includes three years' cess, etc., for Scottish Estates.

16 This year their daughter Rachel is married to Lord Binning, and the expenses directly attributable to this amount to about £300, besides the expenses of the journey to and from Edinburgh, where the marriage took place.

17 This includes £113, 3s. 6d. for 'My Rachels cloaths to her child.'

18 This sum includes Cess and Poll Tax and Poor money, averaging about £36 p. ann.

REPORT OF THE TWENTY-FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SCOTTISH HISTORY SOCIETY

THE TWENTY-FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SOCIETY was held in Dowell's Rooms, Edinburgh, on the 26th November 1910,—Mr. W. B. BLAIKIE in the chair.

The SECRETARY read the Report of the Council as follows :—

During the past year ten members have died, and ten have resigned membership.

Dr. John Dowden, Bishop of Edinburgh, Chairman of Council, was so intimately associated with the daily work of the Society, and its officials and other workers had so learned to lean on his help and encouragement, that his death is felt as the greatest of the great losses which the Society has sustained in recent years. His work on the Lindores and Inchaffray volumes, invaluable as it is, represents only a small fraction of the Society's debt to him.

After filling the vacancies, twenty-four candidates for membership remain on the list.

Except Craig's De Unione, announced in the last Report as about to appear, no volume has been issued since the last General Meeting. Wariston's Diary and Miscellaneous Narratives relating to the '45 will it is hoped be sent out early in 1911, and the other volumes promised for 1909-1910, viz. Lady Grisell Baillie's Household Books, and Seafield Correspondence, are well advanced at press.

The difficulties which have so seriously delayed the issue of

The Scots in Poland will, it is now hoped, be shortly overcome, and the volume issued during the coming year.

For 1910-1911 it is intended to issue two of the three volumes following :—

1. The Book of the Accounts of the Granitars and Chamberlains of the Archbishopric of St. Andrews during Cardinal Beaton's tenure of the See, A.D. 1539 to 1546. Edited by R. K. Hannay.

2. Letter-book of Bailie John Stuart, Merchant in Inverness, 1715-1752. Edited by William Mackay.

3. Miscellany of the Scottish History Society, vol. 3. This will include, among other items, selections from the Wardrobe Book of Edward I. for the 33rd year of his reign (A.D. 1304-05), from the original in the British Museum, which contains a great deal of matter relating to Scotland; a batch of seventeenth-century Haddingtonshire Trials for Witchcraft, edited by Dr. Wallace James; List of Pollable Persons in St. Andrews in 1693, edited by Dr. Hay Fleming; Papers relating to the '15 and the '45, from the originals at Perth; and perhaps Mr. Archibald Constable's long promised translation of Ferrerius' Historia Abbatum de Kynlos.

In accordance with the resolution of last year's Meeting, a general index to the first series of the Society's publications is in preparation, and will in due time be offered to Members.

There are four vacancies in the Council to be filled up, caused by the election of Mr. Donald Crawford as Chairman of Council, and by the retirement in rotation of Sir James Balfour Paul, Lord Guthrie, and Mr. W. B. Blaikie. It is recommended that Sir J. Balfour Paul and Mr. Blaikie be re-elected, and that the other vacancies be filled by the appointment of The Hon. Hew Hamilton Dalrymple and Mr. C. S. Romanes, C.A.

The Accounts of the Hon. Treasurer, of which an abstract is appended hereto, show that the balance in the Society's favour on 10th November 1909, was £472, 1s. 1d., the income for 1909-1910, £529, 10s. 9d., the expenditure, £329, 15s. 11d., and the credit balance on 10th November 1910, £671, 15s. 11d.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the Report, said :—It must be a matter of regret to the Society that I should occupy this place to-day, but our President, Lord Rosebery, who has so frequently given us illuminating addresses from this chair, is perforce absent in the act of making history, and has naturally little time for speaking about history. You have before you the Annual Report for the current year. The Report is short and somewhat laconic, but if you examine it you will find that it is teeming with interest. We have this year to deplore the death of him who was Chairman of Council from the time Professor Masson left us until this year. Bishop Dowden, as you probably are aware, was the life and the soul of the Council of this Society. Mr. Law told us in his last speech in 1903 how the inception of the Society was that of Lord Rosebery, who suggested its establishment in a letter to the Scotsman nearly twenty-five years ago, and that his suggestion was first taken up by Bishop Dowden, who became chairman of a committee that carried the preliminaries through. The interest taken by the Bishop in the Society, and the counsel and assistance he ever gave to those who were doing historical work, can never be forgotten by those who sought his aid. He edited for the Society, The Chartulary of Lindores, and inspired and assisted in the editing of The Charters of the Abbey of Inchaffray. Strange to say, like our first Secretary, Mr. Law, Bishop Dowden was not a Scotsman by birth, but like Mr. Law he became a Scotsman by adoption and association, and these two men did as much to further the study of Scottish history as any Scotsman amongst us.

The Council have elected as their Chairman Sheriff Donald Crawford, a gentleman who has given much service to the Society and who has edited one of its most interesting books.

It is the custom of the Chairman at these annual meetings to give a slight foretaste of the bill of fare which is offered to the members of the Society. I do not think that at any previous meeting the Council have been able to offer a more tempting programme than they have to-day. It is true that only one book has been issued since our last meeting (Professor Terry's Translation of Craig's De Unione), but there are no fewer than five volumes in type awaiting the finishing touches of the various editors. The volume of The Scots in Poland has been provokingly and unavoidably delayed by the difficulty of verifying descriptions and getting documents from Warsaw, but the Council hope that these difficulties will be overcome in the current year.

The issue of The Diary of Johnston of Wariston will complete the first series of the Scottish History Society's publications, and the Council have resolved to prepare a general index of the whole of the sixty-one volumes comprising that series. This it is hoped will be issued to members in the course of the year, and it is believed that it will be a work of the greatest use to students of history. It is possible that the Council may print a small extra edition which may be purchased by libraries and collectors who are not members of the Society, and thus extend the usefulness of the Society's work.

Of the books promised, the first that may be mentioned is The Diary of Johnston of Wariston, 1632-34, and again in the momentous years, 1637-39. This book is edited by Mr. George M. Paul, Deputy Keeper of the Signet, whose sympathetic work on a Diary of Archibald Johnston, issued in 1896, is well known to later members. This new instalment, referring, however, to an earlier period, is of absorbing interest, for it embraces that crucial period in which Laud's Service Book was imposed upon the people of Scotland, and the National Covenant (practically the work of Johnston himself) was prepared and signed. We have here at first hand this epoch-making event graphically told by one of the principal actors. The Diary is, however, more than the mere relation of events; it shows the mental working of a strange, nervous, intensely religious Puritan, full of egotism and introspection, but whose whole soul is filled with a desire to walk closely with his God, whom he consults and to whom he gives information on nearly every page of the journal. There have been few portrayals of the real Covenanter. The Covenanter of romance must disappear when we read this Diary of Johnston of Wariston and compare with it the work, edited by Sheriff Scott Moncrieff twenty-one years ago, The Narrative of James Nimmo. If the Scottish History Society had done nothing else than given these introspective memoirs, showing the inward working of the Covenanter's mind, it would have accomplished a great work.

The Household Book of Lady Grisell Baillie is a volume edited by Mr. R. Scott Moncrieff to be ready shortly. It gives the daily expenditure of an aristocratic family in the last decade of the seventeenth century and the beginning of the eighteenth.

The Correspondence of the first Lord Seafield, edited, from the originals at Cullen House, by Mr. James Grant of Banff, is another book of much historical value. Lord Seafield was Chancellor of Scotland at the time of the Union; it was he who uttered the historical obiter dictum, 'This is the end of an auld sang,' when the last Scottish Parliament accepted the Union.

Then there is a volume of Narratives relating to the '45 with which I am entrusted. To me at least they are all full of interest. They belong to that type of article classed as 'fragments which must not perish,' and the incentive to the collection of these is the motto engraved on the Society's insignia. Among them is a portion of a mutilated manuscript of John Murray of Broughton picked up on the field of Culloden. There is the narrative of a Captain in Lord Balmerino's Horse, an Englishman, occasionally referred to by historians, but which has never before been printed. There are several narratives written by ministers from various parts of the country giving minute local details to be found nowhere else. There is the apology of the Laird of Grant for his somewhat ambiguous conduct during the rising. There is the narrative relating to the capture of Edinburgh and the Battle of Prestonpans. Jack, its author, was a writing-master in Edinburgh, who assisted Professor M'Laurin to prepare the defences of the city, and who attempted to assist Cope's artillery at the Battle of Prestonpans. Lastly, it contains a good deal of narrative and many accounts of secret service performed by Walter Grosset, Commissioner of the Excise, who was an active agent of the Government in the '45.

The programme for the following year begins with a volume by Mr. Hannay on the Accounts of the Granitars and Chamberlains of the Archbishopric of St. Andrews shortly before the Reformation, a theme which has been little written of, yet there is no doubt that it was the inordinate care of the worldly goods of the great ecclesiastics that exasperated the nobility and commons, and contributed largely to the unanimity of the Reformation.

Mr. Maitland Thomson is collecting material for a Miscellany which comprises historical tit-bits ranging over four and a half centuries. Whether that book will be included in the next year's issues remains to be seen.

One work I have left to the last and that is the Letter Book of Bailie John Stuart, to be edited by Mr. William Mackay of Inverness. The Society has hitherto had only one book on commercial affairs, and this volume, giving the details of a Highland merchant's business in the early eighteenth century, will be of much historical value. John Stuart, a bailie of Inverness, who was of the family of Kinchardine in Strathspey, and was related to several other Highland families, was a merchant in Inverness from about the year 1700 till 1752. During that period he carried on an extensive trade, in all kinds of commodities, with Highland chiefs and Government garrisons in the Highlands, as well as with Edinburgh, London, and various parts of the Continental seaboard from Norway and Sweden to Venice. Hugh Miller states in his Scotch Merchant of the Eighteenth Century that coal had not found its way into the Cromarty Firth before 1750, but we find Bailie Stuart bringing coals from Newcastle thirty years before this, probably even earlier. He owned about a dozen ships, some of which were built at Inverness; the oak timber for these was brought from Darnaway and Loch Ness side, and part of the iron and timber frame-work came ready made from Dantzic. Stuart was factor on the Inverness-shire estates of the Earl of Moray. His business transactions and ventures, his successes and misfortunes, are recorded in his letters, which give a vivid picture of the conditions under which trade was carried on in the capital of the Highlands during the first half of the eighteenth century. Among the Bailie's partners in business was William Duff of Braco, afterwards the first Earl of Fife; and his numerous customers and correspondents comprised the Duke of Gordon, the Earls of Moray, Seaforth, Cromartie, Sutherland, and Caithness, Lord Lovat, Lord Reay, Lord President Forbes, The Mackintosh, Lochiel, Mackintosh of Borlum, Glengarry, Stewart of Appin, the Laird of Grant, Sir Alexander Macdonald of Sleat, MacLeod of MacLeod, General Wade, Captain Burt, and the Bailie's cousin, the famous Colonel John Roy Stuart, the Jacobite soldier and poet. One of Stuart's descendants made his mark in British history, for his grandson was that Sir John Stuart who beat the French at the battle of Maida in 1806, the first British general who defeated Napoleon's veterans on European soil. With this programme before you I think you will agree that the Council is not neglecting the interests of the Scottish History Society.

The motion was seconded by SIR JAMES BALFOUR PAUL, and unanimously agreed to.

1. THE object of the Society is the discovery and printing, under selected editorship, of unpublished documents illustrative of the civil, religious, and social history of Scotland. The Society will also undertake, in exceptional cases, to issue translations of printed works of a similar nature, which have not hitherto been accessible in English.

2. The number of Members of the Society shall be limited to 400.

3. The affairs of the Society shall be managed by a Council, consisting of a Chairman, Treasurer, Secretary, and twelve elected Members, five to make a quorum. Three of the twelve elected Members shall retire annually by ballot, but they shall be eligible for re-election.

4. The Annual Subscription to the Society shall be One Guinea. The publications of the Society shall not be delivered to any Member whose Subscription is in arrear, and no Member shall be permitted to receive more than one copy of the Society's publications.

5. The Society will undertake the issue of its own publications, i.e. without the intervention of a publisher or any other paid agent.

6. The Society will issue yearly two octavo volumes of about 320 pages each.

7. An Annual General Meeting of the Society shall be held at the end of October, or at an approximate date to be determined by the Council.

8. Two stated Meetings of the Council shall be held each year, one on the last Tuesday of May, the other on the Tuesday preceding the day upon which the Annual General Meeting shall be held. The Secretary, on the request of three Members of the Council, shall call a special meeting of the Council.

9. Editors shall receive 20 copies of each volume they edit for the Society.

10. The owners of Manuscripts published by the Society will also be presented with a certain number of copies.

11. The Annual Balance-Sheet, Rules, and List of Members shall be printed.

12. No alteration shall be made in these Rules except at a General Meeting of the Society. A fortnight's notice of any alteration to be proposed shall be given to the Members of the Council.
